"Getting male?" Are you a pervert?

Suspicious US mail is opened by the postal inspector.

Suspicious packages from other carriers get opened by the Sheriff.

Harassing emails are both forwarded to the state attorney general, and printed and mailed to the attorney general.

Your stalking is now documented. Proceed at your own risk. Best of Luck.

Note the mention of attorney general at least twice

I was replying sole to the error. When I have the time to do some snipping, I'll do so on longer posts but don't bother on shorter ones as it's not

If you're no longer residing at 17366 N River Road in Chassell yet still have a PO box there, as far as the FCC is concerned, there are still 19 amateurs in Chassell.

> as far as I know no Ham lives within the village of chassel

The FCC doesn't care about the "village", merely the USPS zip code designator. Which, according to QRZ.COM, places the following amateurs in Chassell, MI:

Completely meaningless. The "local" VE team could consist of people who have to drive 200 miles to administer a VE session.

> nope only in your demnted reams Mike

Why not lodge a formal complaint with the ARRL VEC regarding this VE Teams' actions?

> they can be expected to uphold the comitments they make however

Not really. They're volunteers. They require 3 VEs to administer an exam session. If they can't get at least 3 VEs (if not more for safety) to donate their time, it doesn't matter what 'commitments' you think they have made -- they can't conduct a session.

> and you just said they could refuse a test session without rsiking > their licenses

That's correct. A VE team is under no obligation to conduct a session at the whim of the testee. A VE team that refuses to conduct a session on the basis that the applicants are codeless techs, however, risks having their credentials pulled by the VEC they work under.

What would you have me do, Mr. "Cheese"? (I'd use your name and/or callsign, but you don't include either in your postings.)

It seems you want me to stop posting the facts here, particularly when you don't like the facts presented.

> The story presented in QST is preposterous.

Do you mean this story on the ARRL website?

http://www.arrl.org/arrlletter/98/980320/

Why is it preposterous?

It's a fact that gifted young children, placed in a supportive environment, can often learn things far beyond the mean/average/median for their biological age.

> Only you believed it.

That's demonstrably untrue.

The folks at ARRL believed it enough to put it on the website.

The folks at FCC believed it enough to issue the licenses.

And even when AF6AY pointed out the story to FCC in his Reply Comments to 98-143, FCC still believed it.

There have been other verified stories about young amateurs. Since 2000, a six-year-old has passed the General, and a seven-year-old has passed the Extra. Both stories in QST.
FCC had no problem believing either.

In fact that seven-year-old broke the previous record, held by an eight-year-old who passed the old pre-2000
Extra, complete with 20 wpm code and five written tests.

All those young amateurs still have their licenses. They haven't gotten into any problems with FCC.

If anything is preposterous, it's the idea that amateur radio needs some sort of minimum age limit.

If anything is preposterous, it's someone accusing complete strangers of "fraud" and "hypocrisy" without any objective evidence.

My view is that if there is an unwitting accomplice, it is you. Who is Robesin?

What was her requirement to do so? Dee made no derogatory comments about the head case in Michigan. Mark's claims about Dee's actions and your statements are erroneous and ridiculous.

I can think of a couple of reasons:

1) Doesn't like children, or doesn't want to deal with them.

2) Doesn't want amateur radio to be "G-rated".

3) Thinks radio should be an adults-only activity.
(There's a quote to this effect).

4) Wants to cut off a source of new amateurs

5) Wants to spite those amateurs who were licensed at an early age. (I earned my Novice at age 13, Technician and Advanced at 14, and Extra at 16. The only reason I took me to 16 to get the Extra was the old 2 year experience rule.)

6) Is jealous of the accomplishments of young amateurs

7) Believes that young people learn Morse Code more easily, and are more likely to become skilled in its use and actually use it as radio amateurs. Cutting off the supply of young, Morse-Code-skilled amateurs at the source is one way to fight the use of the mode.

How's that?

Possibly. The problem is that such retesting would place a burden both on the licensees and the VE system.

Yes, that would be a shame.

Actually it's quite rare. But it's certainly a lot more common than such violations by young amateurs.

> Just think how embittered you would be if you had to wait 80 years to get

Heck, I'd be embittered if I'd had to wait until I was 14 years old!

AF6AY did not have to wait 80 years, however. When he was young, there was no age requirement. He wants to impose a requirement that he did not have to deal with.

He has always been eligible to get an amateur radio license. He could have earned an amateur radio license whenever he wanted. He chose to wait all those years.

Most thinking people know enough to smile and move on. Like some of the things Mark says.

Is it really worth a mailing campaign to his neighbors and neighboring hams? Does that make you feel better?

You can't? Tell that to Jim.

You could also claim they are all in Jeff Hermann's PO Box. And you'd almost be right.

In this group it's never safe to say anything. Just the facts, Ma'am.

So there cannot be enclaves of Extra class hams who are mostly VE's?

If so then there can't be two (2) four and a half year olds (4.5) passing amateur exams.

They don't fit the normal distribution.

Quite the opposite. It illustrates the fact concisely that given the low number of licensed amateurs in your town (19), 1 of which is you and the other of which is your wife (meaning there are 17 others) and the fact that statistically only 1/6th of those hams are going to be Extra-class operators (17 * .16 = 2.8), that means there are not enough licensed extra-class operators in your town to administer you an examination -- even assuming 100% of those Extra-class operators were also VEs.

You claim you were discriminated against by evil procoders. If this is true, wouldn't you want those VEs punished so they couldn't likewise discriminate against other nocoders in the area?

Not at all. Sleet happens. There have been cases locally where VE teams have called around looking for other VEs to help out at test sessions when one or more of the VEs scheduled to show up for some reason didn't.

Again, ask the ARRL if they allow their VE teams to discriminate against codeless techs. I virtually guarentee you such a team would get their credentials revolked.

In the same message you said you're getting your extra-class operator ticket.

Perhaps if you limited yourself to a dozen posts a day rather than 300, you'd remember what you said.

> mike do any besides myself and my wife need to upgrade at all?

Nobody "needs" to upgrade, if they're happen with their operating privileges in their current form. Some folks are happy with their existing license class and have no intention on upgrading.

I'm not familiar with the "AES Hamfest" in MI. My source of area VE examinations is the ARRL web site, which lists upcoming examination sessions for both the W5YI and ARRL VECs. According to that published data, the only upcoming session sponsored by the VE team you've libeled is their session in April.

If my knowledge base is "all but" non-existant, what's that makes yours? Negative territory?

I'm responsible for what I write. I'm not responsible for what other people write.

You seem to want to use the concept of "passive acceptance" on everyone.

If that is the case, Mark, I sure hope you spend a lot of time publically denouncing all the travesties occuring thruout the world -- since, if you do not, clearly you agree with them.

For example, can you please point out your public posting condemning the tribal violence in Rwanda? With all the women and children getting hacked to death, certainly you posted something condemning these deaths.

If you didn't... well, clearly according to the logic you apply to other people's postings, you support murdering women and children.

Given that there are many changes to the regulations over the course of 10 years, would it be a tremendous burden to have every ham take a small examination covering current rules and regulations at the time of renewal? Not being a VE I cannot say for sure, but I would think the impact would be fairly minimal on most VE teams. In reality you're talking (on average) 5k renewals per month spread out over the entire USA.

Well, I didn't mean amateurs, I was referring more to how old people seem to get bitter with age.

> He chose to wait all those years.

One has to wonder (if even for a brief moment) why you would purposely deny yourself years of enjoyment.

My level of activity in ham radio varies depending on my parental obligations. With the birth of my 3rd in '98 I found I had almost no time by 2000. Now that he is 8, I find I have more time as he begins to assert his independence and my other two are into their teens.

As my life proceeds, I may experience various levels of active/inactivity, but I'll always have a ham ticket to enjoy.

The regulations can change so much in a decade, I really do not think it is a major burden to have a licensed ham take a small examination covering topical material which has changed over the past decade. This would help ensure our "pool of trained radio operators" are knowledgable about all the latest rules, regs, etc.

> is that something you personaly empathize with?

I'm busy enjoying life and ham radio. I made 2 contacts late this morning before I started working on my motorcycle engine rebuild project. How 'bout you?

major I agree some burden though it merit study as does the proposal
the bigest burden i see is that I think you are prosing a new question pool for renewal (call it the new element one) their are question are you proposing changing to int he other pools as well like require this rules pool and element 2 for techs (and then wed like pull the ruls questions of element 3 and 4)

more info is needed to gauge the level of burden

Oh, my. Now you did it again. You called him "Morkie". No, not directly, but in the message topic. Mark will twist that for sure.
Of course had you changed the topic line, he'd have whined that you hijacked the thread.
It is best to never again deal with Mark, Dee. He is our "professional victim", if you've not already discerned that for yourself.

Really? Does he "stake" an investment in the stock market or in real consider those Buffy the Vampire Slayer shows you watch enterrainment and not the real thing.

He CANNOT, Brian...:-) He's been dogging this one since 1999

albatross hung around his neck...and that ancient mariner
just can't make it all rhyme.

For example, Jimmie thinks that "AF6AY" wrote a comment to the FCC in 1998 (accepted on FCC 98-143 on 13 Jan 99) but that is clearly WRONG. Callsign AF6AY wasn't even close on the sequential callsign list back then. Jimmie was first licensed in US amateur radio at age 14 so he bridles at any mention, even suggestions that a minimum age be set at 14.
Jimmie is a champion of OOK CW morse code and gets upset when others don't think that is "important." Jimmie gets all upset when others don't worship St. Hiram and all the things that are old in ham radio. Sigh...

I replied to Jim Weir of Grass Valley, CA, and a former Primary candidate for Governor of California. Jimmie Miccolis of Pennsylvania has never run for any government elected position and certainly never served in the military.
But, Jimmie runs his newsgroup "transceiver" at "full break-in" whenever he hears my "signal." :-)

It be QRM, with heavy QRN on top of it.

Wonderful. I'll just think of all you worshippers of St. Hiram as pre-teeners, mentality and reasoning
"maturity" to match... :-)

Now, just WHY are you continuing your "age limit" diatribe past the 8 year and 2 months time of that particular Comment on an NPRM that got settled by a Report and Order?

Is it the usual "nyah, nyah" to be followed by a

(This is one of the two guys who sued my friend over his 220 repeater back in 1986. To bad the FCC is not gonna collect the whole $11,000 but maybe he will be forever banned from ham radio instead. What goes around comes back around.)

FCC lops fine, admonishes Amateur Radio licensee (Mar 2, 2007) -- The FCC has reduced from $11,000 to $2500 the fine it imposed in 2004 on Daniel Granda, KA6VHC, of Whittier, California. In a Memorandum Opinion and Order (MO&O) released March 1, the FCC said Granda intentionally interfered with Amateur Radio communications and failed to respond to FCC correspondence. Granda, whose Amateur Extra class license renewal is under review, petitioned for reconsideration of the $11,000 fine in 2004. "In his petition, Mr Granda does not dispute our finding that he caused deliberate interference to Amateur Radio communications nor does he deny his failure to respond to official Commission correspondence," recounted Assistant FCC Enforcement Bureau Chief George R. Dillon, who signed the MO&O. "He does contend, however, that imposition of the full forfeiture amount would impose a financial hardship on him and his spouse." The FCC agreed to reduce the fine to $2500 after reviewing Granda's federal tax returns. "The reduction of the forfeiture amount, however, does not lessen the severity of the violations cited in this proceeding, specifically Mr Granda's intentional interference to radio communications," Dillon cautioned. "For that reason, we will further admonish Mr Granda for his violations." In an ominous footnote, the MO&O noted that the Enforcement Bureau had asked the Wireless Telecommunications Bureau (WTB) to "consider this violation in processing Mr Granda's pending license renewal application for KA6VHC." In August 2003, the WTB set aside the grant of renewal of Granda's license, which expired in November 2003. His renewal application has reverted to "pending" status.

I'm not sure if there needs to be a separate question pool. Perhaps a 10 or 20 question exam pulled from the rules and regs in the appropriate pool you're renewing in (e.g. extra renewals would pull questions from the rules/regs section, etc.)

well i well diagree with if we are to add this burden how ever much it is let us GET something for it (even seemed to agree with sopmething a statement saying we getting very little from the 5 wpm code esp compared to time an effort put to prepaing and runing it but braord element of rules question derected at everyone prvelegdes since we are all under the same rules

indeed you seemed to to critize me for not being outraged that you can miss all rules question and still pass.

I am not out raged but I adknowledge as a failing of the current system, if we are going to try and fix lets fix it right

Shut up. I'm in the bathroom, slide her under the door.
<> Shut up and get the maple syrup.

Mommy, Mommy! Can I go to the toilet?
Yes Johnny I'll take you in a minute.
Can Granny take me?
Why?
Her hand shakes.

"Come upstairs, son, like a good boy."
"No, Mommy, you'll only throw me down again."

Daddy, Daddy! What is queer?
Shut up and unhook my bra.

Daddy, Daddy! What's a pervert?
Shut up, kid, and keep sucking....

What did the little boy say when his mother scolded him for cutting his Christmas present (a spotted hamster) neatly in two pieces with a cleaver? Answer: "But, Mommy, you said that if I was good, I could halve him."

AND WE WONDER HOW MORKINS TURNED FRUIT!

Ok, I guess I misunderstood, I thought you were getting an Extra-class ticket at the AES Hamfest.

That's too bad. It would seem the local nocoders would be happy to be free from the clutches of those nasty procoder VE teams.

In the first 11 days of March 2007, you've posted 550 messages according to Google.

Can we say "obsessed"?

You did, with your claims of being unable to upgrade due to the actions of procoders.

Most people like to deal with a local team, because it is closer, more convenient, etc., however, there is no requirement you do so.

If you're talking about your level of obsession with RRAP, I agree.

Nope. That's not what I said. What I said was: if you put aspects of your private life into USENET (read: public) forums, they become legitmate topics of discussion.

In other words, you never posted a message denouncing the violence against women in Rwanda.

Therefore, using Morgan-logic, we are to conclude that you support hacking women and children to death with machetes.

Can I have a copy of this letter?

As an ARRL Life Member, it concerns me greatly that the League would support discriminating against any license class.

no the exact terms of our text of our conversation is something he asked me not to disclose since we are being VERY frank with each other, if I dislclosed it further I fear he would nto be as candid as he has been

I did not say support mike but the ARRL does reconize it lacks full power to control and the issue is not license clase but politcal affliation within the faction fo the ARS although in this case only affecting members f one class

And who's going to report me?

Have you been stupid all your life or did you Momma drop you on your head as an adult?

Thanks for the comedy. It was a nice way to end the weekend. Great weather, took the kids fishing and played a little basketball.

We gotta do this again more often. Thanks for being such a good

Do you know that everyone is a potential HIV carrier? Especially emergency room nurses.

You do? I didn't think you knew who your daddy was.

it just wouldn't be the same without you.

You're right, Len! I was mistaken about that. My bad.
Apologies all around.

It was Leonard H. Anderson, a non-radio amateur at the time, who wrote those Reply Comments to FCC. And even though Reply Comments aren't supposed to bring up new subjects, the age limit thing was presented to FCC.

I agree - it is wonderful.

Why?

How was it "settled", Len? FCC did not refer to your Reply Comments at all.

> Is it the usual "nyah, nyah" to be followed by a > call to mommy by all you mental pre-teeners?

No, Len - that's you projecting your own motivations and mentality on others. Again.

Here's why I brought up the "age limit" thing:

"hot-ham-and-cheese" claimed that nobody
but me believed the story about the young
amateurs. He said the whole thing was preposterous.

I pointed out that not only did I believe it, but
so did the FCC.

Not only did FCC accept and process those licenses, but they took no action after Leonard H. Anderson pointed out the story on the ARRL website.

So "hot-ham-and-cheese" was simply mistaken
about me being the only one who believed the story.

The "age limit thing" also has a direct bearing on the VE system. You accused complete strangers of "fraud" and "hypocrisy" with no evidence at all.

It would be interesting to see the reaction of the VEs who administered your testing to your accusations of "fraud" and "hypocrisy" aimed at
the ARRL and some Indiana VEs.

Say - got that LP and tower up yet Len?
How do you like the Icom IC-7800?

It is called "quaverling" or a "quaverling lisp" by phonologists.

Woger's taped QSOs contain many classic examples of quaverling that you won't hear anywhere else on the air. Rumor has it that Woger picked up the speech pattern while hanging out in Glendale's Shipwreck Lounge on weekends.

1644. Grace Under Fire

Newsgroup: rec.radio.amateur.policy
Date: 2007-03-12 19:19:33 UTC
From: "LenAnderson@ieee.org" <LenAnderson@ieee.org>
Message-ID: <1173727173.004009.323340@8g2000cwh.googlegroups.com>
Source record: 186701

One of the "reasons" for the decline in total US amateur radio licensee totals by pro-coders was that "No-code-test Technicians have reached the end of their grace period and quit." That isn't the case and the numbers of each class tell a different story.

Using only two publicly-accessible sources, www.hamdata.com and the ARRL at www.arrl.org/fcc/stats.html, the following tabulation was done for 9 February 2007. It should be noted that James Miccolis, N2EY, seems to use the ARRL numbers since they are an exact match. If so, then the ARRL class totals exclude both Club callsigns and all those licensees who are IN their two-year grace period.

Class	Hamdata	ARRL	Difference
Novice	29,048	22,725	6,323
Technician	309,939	291,312	18,627
Tech-Plus	39,827	30,243	9,584
General	144,484	132,863	11,621
Advanced	76,333	68,837	7,496
Extra	111,782	108,789	2,993
Club	10,380	---	---
Total, All	721,793	---	---
Tot.Less Club	711,413	654,769	56,664

It can be concluded that the 'Difference' column represents all those licensees who are in their two-year grace period. Tabulated again and calculated to the percentage of totals of ALL in one license class:

Class	Difference (Grace Period)	Percentage of Grace Period
Novice	6,323	21.76
Technician	18,627	6.01
Tech-Plus	9,584	24.06
General	11,621	8.04
Advanced	7,496	9.82
Extra	2,993	2.68
All classes	56,664	7.96

The Extra class represents the long-time radio amateur, one whose interest is very strong and more than likely to keep their license as long as possible. General class is the largest of the "code-tested" group (pre 23 Feb 07) but shows a rough median position of the 10/12 year license period (non-expired/full-term-plus-grace). Advanced class, not being a new class since 2000, is expected to be higher in percentage of the expired since they've had nearly 7 years to renew as either General or to upgrade to Extra or just let it lay until it is fully expired.

Novice class is the long-time loser since its numbers have been declining well before the 2000 Restructuring. Technician-Plus, a category change as a result of creation of the no-code-test Technician in 1991 is a surprising tops in percentage-of-grace-period. One reason may be that all "higher" classes have had a long history of community bigotry against them going back before 1991; the "unequal-rights" variety of bigotry that relegated them to the back of the amateur community bus, of drinking-from-separate-fountains sort of thing.

Technician class, the overwhelmingly largest of all US license classes, has the second-lowest grace period percentage at only 6.01%. Had the pro-coder "predictions" been correct, those would have been higher, approximately 9 or 10%. Obviously they aren't and the pro-coder "predictions" were wrong. Technician class continues to attract newcomers and its class total shrinks mainly by Techs upgrading to "higher" classes after the 23 Feb 07 code test elimination date. There isn't the slightest hint of any "exodus" of no-code-test Technician class from US amateur radio licensing.

For those who doubt those numbers (and I'm sure there is at least one), I have PDF copies of the referenced site downloads that can be sent as attachments to private e-mail.

Good grief, an expression of personal WRONGNESS with an APOLOGY! The world may be coming to an end!

Oh, my, Jimmie BLEW IT ALL AWAY...!

In 1998 I was NOT licensed as any radio amateur but was ALREADY licensed as a COMMERCIAL radio operator for 42 years...and had actual experience in long-distance HF communications 45 years before.

Further, I had been a hobbyist in radio and electronics since 1947 (hobbies are classified as 'amateur' activities by almost everyone else except olde-tyme ham morsemen). Not only that, in 1998 I had already retired from a four-decade career as an electronics engineer in southern California aerospace industries...and was already in a new career that had involved a Private Land Mobile Radio Services station of which I was co-owner.

So, you are wanting to still label me as an "amateur"
in radio?

Of course you do. You can't help but attempt to denigrate anything I post in here. :-(

>Here's why I brought up the "age limit" thing:

That's just this latest go-around. What about all those OTHER past harrangues you've tried to hang on my SUGGESTION on minimum age limits?

>"hot-ham-and-cheese" claimed that nobody
>but me believed the story about the young
>amateurs. He said the whole thing was preposterous.
>I pointed out that not only did I believe it, but
>so did the FCC.

WRONG. The FCC did NOT "believe" it...the FCC accepted the input of the ARRL VEC. Pro forma stuff done electronically.

The FCC had long before introduced the "no age restrictions" on license applicants.

>So "hot-ham-and-cheese" was simply mistaken
>story.

NO. You are confusing an ARRL "story" (an article on their website) with what YOU "think the FCC believes." You only IMAGINE what "the FCC believes."

>The "age limit thing" also has a direct bearing on the >VE system.

Bullshit. Another fabrication of yours.

>You accused complete strangers of
>"fraud" and "hypocrisy" with no evidence at all.

TS. I will CONTINUE to do so, electronically or face-to-face in-person ANY time there is the OBVIOUS sign of such things.

>It would be interesting to see the reaction of the >VEs who administered your testing to your
>accusations of "fraud" and "hypocrisy" aimed at
>the ARRL and some Indiana VEs.

No problem to me. Just pay for their transport and lodging out here, along with yourself, and you can "see" all you want. Record it if you want. I'll just gather a group of local licensed (and unlicensed) radio amateurs of like opinions and we can all have a big gang-bang. Okay?

Otherwise, DROP this stupid harrangue of yours that is already SEVEN YEARS OLD. You aren't "winning' a damn thing and you are annoying
the rest of the folks (with the exception of Heil, Deignan, and probably Kelly) with your "endless summer" of "no-age-limit" harrangues.

>Say - got that LP and tower up yet Len?
>How do you like the Icom IC-7800?

I'm considering a Request for Quote from Harris on the station and for an octet of rhombics on a large ranch in Wyoming. The octet is, naturally, for DX on 40m CW and up in frequency along with a remote switching selection to eliminate rotator needs.
[the cattle can graze peacefully underneath it all]
I'm even considering abondoning that Wyoming territory in favor of Nevada or Arizona. Takes time.

No, I'm not buying stock in any of the Big3 in Japan. The shares of General Electric and AT&T here are doing just fine.

Thanks for asking.

funny. i'm posting using a usenet reader that suports fixed pitch fonts, which usenet asci and most ascii is in, to a medium that uses servers to propogate whatever i post to other servers so people who also use newsreaders, which bizarly, what fuckwit though of this, will also support fixed pitch fonts. just to have some lamer who has to use google to bitch about googles lack of use and non support of fixed pitch fonts and blame me for it!

>Maybe you had epilepsy at the point of sending

maybe you should pull your head out of your arse, get a real news reader and use a real news server instead of that web abortion that lets you post your stupidity to rest of the world by people who know what usenet is and know its not run by those sesnoring cunts google.

>Smoke a J, Peg.

have you conciderd not posting to usenet? i think things would work better for you that way and you can keep your classlessness to yourself instead of blaming me for it.

TNX for trying to help but I'm not finding the prep as hard as I expected. I'm now passing my practice exams without difficulty at forty plus questions correct and I'm only two chapters into the ARRL extra license book. I bookmarked the links for future reference and I do appreciate the effort you went to in finding them for me.

sleep in the same room with you. You are mentally defective.

Yes, and your high pitched girly voice does that on your old shitty shows on mp3, Davies.

> Woger's (Wrong guess again, pizza BOY)

Poor Lardass, your old mp3's of your Domestic cunt show proves you have a high pitched lisping voice. Especially when you pound your flabby fists on your cheapassed computer desk and whine "Steve Holsten is not a pedo!" Your co-workers have said you are something of a queer duck, and your waddle through the restaurant as you put your deliveries in that cheapassed used car of yours is the topic of conversation when you are out making your deliveries or cleaning the toilets before your shift is over. P.S. Roger doesn't go to the Shipwreck Lounge, youu fucking imbecile, and besides, if you knew what the fuck you were talking about, you'd know it is a redneck joint, not a gay bar.
You fucked up as usual, "Christy Davies"! BWHAHAHAHAHAHA!

Military intellegence reports state that Mark Morgan (aka Goon Gobbler) was never in the Military, only worked as a contractor, a Marine shoved his boot up his ass, and then Morkie cried rape...that is all.

You're a radio amateur, Len. When you got the valid Amateur Radio license (regardless of license class) is a radio amateur. Nobody else.

"Harangues", Len. One 'n'.

I brought it up this time because it proved
"hot-ham-and-cheese" to be mistaken.

As for being a "SUGGESTION" - everything proposed to FCC in Comments and Reply
Comments is essentially a "SUGGESTION".

You wrote what you wanted FCC to do: ban
anyone under the age of 14 from Amateur Radio.
I think you still want that. FCC looked at your idea/proposal/suggestion/reasoning/arguments about that and chose not to act on it.

No, right.

I pointed it out.

Sure they did. If they did not, they would not have issued the licenses.

In 1998? Can you be sure?

Not exactly.

There has never been any age restriction for a US amateur radio license. The FCC and all its predecessors in amateur radio regulations never ever saw the need for any such restriction. Not since the beginning of mandatory licensing in 1912.

The ARRL story was presented to FCC in your Reply Comments, Len. You went into detail about it as a reason to impose a minimum age requirement for an amateur radio license.

Someone at FCC reads all the Comments and Reply Comments. So people at FCC knew all about the licensing of those 4 year olds, from your Reply Comments and the ARRL story.

FCC also enforces their rules, and has investigated claims of rules violations at VE sessions. But they did not investigate that VE session, nor revoke any licenses or VE accreditation in connection with it.

FCC clearly believed, and continues to believe, that there were no rules violations committed at the VE session which licensed those 4 year olds.

FCC accepts the ARRL story as valid, not "preposterous". Otherwise they would have acted.

Why? Because I proved "hot-ham-and-cheese" to OK for DX but not optimum for USA contacts, except maybe to the coasts. Rhombics are so 1930s. too - the modern way is Yagis. Three elements on 40, for example.

And why stop at 40? At this point in the sunspot

You're welcome!

So I guess you won't be on the amateur bands
any time soon. Particularly "40 CW and up".

I could be mistaken about that, of course.

7037 kHz is the RRAP CW frequency, btw. I've worked quite a few there....

Wow Markie, you did have a post or two, but it was under "an old friend", not under an_old_friend, so as I said another variable sock, therefore, no apology is necessary. However, how does posting once or twice equate to being a "frequent poster". You are a frequent post here, even excessive, but I would not say that you a frequent poster on the moderated group, there are people posting far more than you.
How come you can control yourself on the moderated group but you can't seem to do so here? Or are they controlling your posting behavior?
Based on your past posting patterns, I would say that you are probably being kept in check by the moderators.

Have to make a correction, Markie you have posted a total of three times, the reason I couldn't find all of you posts is because of your new misspelled sock of "an old freind" with a yahoo address, the word is spelled f-r-i-e-n-d. Will you please use a spell checker, it would help your credibility.

The likelihood is You are more than 99.9% correct.

If Mark didn't thread-hijack, and spam this newsgroup with "yet another stalking post" every 15 seconds, RRAP would be a remarkably quiet place. The beauty of the moderated group is it prevents him from spamming the newsgroup with nonsense.

Naturally, there are mechanisms in place to prevent him from doing that here too. For example, someone with a linux box could run a robo-moderation program and automatically inject cancellation control messages into the USENET newsstream whenever one of his postings appears. This is commonly referred to as a "USENET Kiss Of Death".

Occasionally Mark can make some coherent, even useful, postings worth discussing. Unfortunately these seem to be few and far between, for reasons that elude most of us.

"It won't be long now...." Except (of course) with Jimmie Doing His Thing about 'how everyone else that challenged Him (in anything) is always wrong.' :-)

Well, in this newsgroup as well as RRAM there's the usual self-praise of amateur radio for its "invaluable emergency work." :-)

There must be a great deal of Conscience going on where hams aren't supposed to have FUN and ENJOYMENT out of their hobby. They have to endlessly rationalize among themselves that They are some kind of Minutemen of Emergency Communications, ready to spring into action at a moment's notice with superb, never-fail equipment to Save The Day! :-)

Not likely. Some on RRAM aren't buying all that and are speaking truth. That's a very good thing, in my mind. [but Jimmie will spend hours at the keyboard teling me I'm all

'wrong' and 'mistaken' :-)]

I'm now INTO US amateur radio and intend to stay...as long as it remains a FUN HOBBY. If I wanted to DO emergency work, I'd go volunteer for such things with a recognized agency that actually DOES that sort of thing. Yesterday, the 13th of March, was the 55th personal anniversary of my being sworn into service with the United States Army. The reason for that volunteering was rather more SERIOUS at the time than playing around with radios in my spare time. Amateur radio just is NOT anywhere close to being that "serious" on a national or local scale. Amateur radio is basically a HOBBY, never anything more than that despite what all the chiefs and seniors of membership organizations say.

At the start of this particular thread I put up some numbers about some amateur volunteers' efforts in exam testing and what other, numbers-oriented websites were showing was the result of all that. There was NO evidence then nor now on any "hordes of CB types" or "onslaught of no-coders" "suddenly filling the ranks (and, supposedly 'the bands'). What that really showed was only a slight bump in the status-quo of what all the self-proclaimed pro-coder gurus CLAIMED was going to happen. Yawn time.

When I posted the first message on 7 Mar 07 I was not yet aware that the FCC had put me into the US amateur radio database. :-) Some others did later, which made me look again. Some of the "congratulators" (notably those pro-coders who think I'm a 'beginner' in radio) are now showing how hyprocritcal they really are... :-(No surprise to me since I had known of their traits long before.

Most of this thread is filled with the usual filth and insults of the immature male kind who seem to have never out-grown their middle-school mentalities. That's a sad thing but we don't really know if those anony-mousies are at all INTO amateur radio. Nevertheless, I am INTO US amateur radio and intend to stay for a while...and also to speak my mind at MY discretion. :-)

That's quite a stretch in logic, Morkie. What factual basis are you making this declaration?
Of course, you never let facts get in the way of your uninformed opinions.
The fact is when you are at a loss for a comeback, you spam the same lame phrases you've heard your entire life onto others. And get a doctor to fix your lisp, Morkie.

Sure you do, you were up late last night neglecting your shemale wife.

You're free to start a topic on something in which you have some experience or expertise if you feel that you can't contribute to a topic already under discussion. Maybe you could contribute some general knowledge of end fed antennas or begin a thread on the hows of DXing.

Who has to do that, Len? Radio amateurs can and do provide emergency communications. I've never read anything which indicates that amateur radio equipment never fails. It can be available when the commercial infrastructure fails in an emergency.

What is the truth, Len? Have you written the truth or have you made things up using the generic "they"? Have you written that "they" say something when the only person saying that particular thing is yourself?

Maybe public service work just isn't for you. Maybe you'll find that chasing DX or contesting is more to your liking.

It is more likely that you're simply not aware of it, Len. You're a newcomer.

Actually, what the numbers show is that doing away with Morse code testing hasn't resulted in the entry into amateur radio of those technical whiz kids whom Carl Stevenson called "otherwise qualified". The barrier seems to have been a myth.

No one said that you're a beginner in radio, Len. You a beginner in amateur radio. You've demonstrated that you're green through your statements in a number of your recent posts. Don't expect acceptance as an instant expert in amateur radio, old boy.

We know that a number of them are licensed. One, who isn't anonymous but who posts under many different nyms, is apparently a fairly active radio amateur.

Yes, you finally acted and obtained an amateur radio license. You spoke your mind long before obtaining the amateur radio license. You made numerous factual errors back then and, as I've noted, you still make factual errors.

show you are on almost all day and night. In fact, you sit around just waiting for somebody to post so you can spam your same lame phrases.

Interesting. I haven't maintained a USENET feed in quite some time, so I'm not "up" on the latest developments with INN and the like.

Not too long about (perhaps 2 years) another newsgroup I participate in under a different ID was getting flooded by carp, and one of the dudes in that group maintains his own USENET site, so he instituted some type of robomoderation program to auto-cancel postings -- and, oddly, it seemed to work -- at least, from where I read news (cox.net's news servers).

> You have been trashing this group with > inane followups to almost everything for at least the last 18 months,

I wouldn't say "one" of the primary reasons. I would say THE primary reason.

In the first 3 months of 2007, according to Google Groups posting profiles, we have posted the following message counts from the email address 'mark@kb9rqz.org':

Jan: 738 messages
Feb: 669 messages
Mar: 668 messages (and the month is only 1/2 over!)

Naturally, this doesn't take into account any of Mark's other email addresses. For example, under this 'konstains@hotmail.com' email address, according to Google Groups' posting profile, we have the following message counts:

Jan: 162
Feb: 107
Mar: 88

I'm sure there are other email addresses as well.

> Your
> inability to realize that fact is what has led most of us who have > that you have mental problems.

It has been my observation (in the 3 months since I've returned) that any topic started in this forum is transformed by Mark into some form of "insult"/"assault"/"crime" upon his person within the first 3 layers of the thread.

I find it virtually impossible to follow the (very few) conversations in this group, because of the excessive amount of thread-hijacking, subject renaming, etc. A discussion on VE testing rules, for instance, will get renamed to "just another saltking thread" within 3-6 hours of it starting. Then, attempting to wade thru the myriad of Morgasms (and followups/taunting posts by other retards here as well) simply becomes an exercise in futility.

There are probably many decent threads here I have something clicked "mark all read" on simply because I cannot wade thru the crap... which is too bad.

The moderated group is, naturally, an easier read.

kh6hz

(its 10:12 Eastern... wanna bet by 6pm this thread is renamed 'yet another salkting thread'?)

I called and tried to report you, but they said they don't handle cyber creeps from West Virginia unless they sexually harass or solicit Michigan children.

Hate to contradict our resident head case, but that's exactly what the original RFD said. To quote the relevant part of it: "Over the past several years, the traffic on both groups has become largely flame wars, spam, and personal ad-hominem discussions ..."

People who want answers to amateur radio questions are well advised to post them in rec.radio.amateur.moderated. If your news server doesn't carry the new group yet, you can always go to Google Groups for the time being and post from there.

In the meantime, I think that it would be a good idea to repost a message like the one posted by "peace" at least once a day to all of the rec.radio.amateur hierarchy for the next several weeks.

Len, you'll find that the great majority of hams who get on the air in the ham bands are quite well behaved and friendly. This newsgroup is not a representative sample of hams. So get on the air (if you haven't already) and have fun with the various modes and aspects of ham radio!

It would be interesting to see the stats, if you ever compile them again.

A couple hundred postings per month from someone involved in an active newsgroup with a hot topic of conversation isn't outside the realm of possibility. With 30 days per month, even posting 5-10 messages is going to result in 150 to 300 messages per month.

I've pulled up some of the posting profiles on my old email addresses dating back to 1990. No idea how long google's archives go back, but the very first UUCP node with a newsfeed I ran in the late 80's doesn't show any messages until April 1990. The most postings I can come up with are 116 in January 1992 -- and now, 123 in February 2007.

For someone active, I can see where they could post upwards of 600+ messages a month... in several newsgroups. There really is no excuse, however, for the continued MorganTurds in RRAP. I can understand why he was banned from QRZ.

I only really read 2 (well, 3 now) groups since USENET is a low priority on my daily activities list, so as laughable as it may be, Outlook Express works a-ok.

This would be a good idea. Or, perhaps, an auto-generated email reply to all newbie posters advising them they may have better luck in RRA.moderated.

That's all fine and dandy.

Despite Mass having laws which prohibit harassment over the Internet -- the District Attorney refused to do anything about it because he lacked jurisdiction. The interstate nature of the offense made it a "federal" case, and the Feds have better things to do then chase people who harass you online. The end result was she had to change her email address.

So... you can quote Michigan law all you want... but it has absolutely zero relevance to someone living in another state.

Oh, I'm sure that if you were to take the time to compile such stats again and supply addresses to where these stats can be sent, well, my bet is that somebody would be more than willing to send them along via snail mail.

Let us now see how long it will take Mark to change the topic of this thread

You could certainly give it a try, hot-ham-and-cheese. I've seen nothing forbidding it. The only trouble is that you'd have to stick to civil conversation and you might have to stick to facts. In this case, you've stuck to innuendo. It has been repeatedly pointed out to you by me and others, that any station is responsible for his own operation under the regs of the country which has issued his license. He is not responsible for the operation of a station he contacts--especially one in a different country and continent. If you don't think you could make such a post, sticking to facts and not what you think you know, you could talk about end fed antennas or provide the readers with the fine points of maintaining a high hourly rate in the CQ WW DX 'test.

Mark's nonsensical gibbering in NIM Busters is being repeated here. It is yet more empty spew which demonstrates the pathology of Mark's behavior, and it is an excellent example of how Mark has selfishly degraded this news group while he does the bidding of the voices in his head.

In message <1149094824.180528.105660@j55g2000cwa.googlegroups.com>, Mark Morgan autolamed himself when he said to Secwet Woger, "you arer [sic] everywhere like a cockroach"

No, you are not. You are showing your true colors and Dave is nowhere to be found at the below link.
You and Roger are, though.
If folks thought you were only a borderline psychotic, this will convince them that you are a full-blown Kook.

Roger that, Bob. Some long-time listening to the HF and 2m bands have shown me that. :-)

When the new equipment arrives, I'll get busy re-arranging the home office for its new "radio room" function (at least in one corner).
It may have to be with some #14 wire strung through the row of cypresses along one side of my property (for under 10m frequency bands) but that's life. :-)

So? He decided to use psk instead of voice for his first contacts, so what?
Where is the irony you are trying to allege? PSK is superior to CW in many ways except that you need a PC with sound card to receive instead of a brain.

Much of my conversation on this unmoderated newsgroup is civil,
probably more civil than is deserved.

What amateur rules require you to make contact with out of band

You're right. I've been fairly gentle with you, for example. The gent you serve as electrolyte hasn't been very civil here. He attempts to run at the ragged edge in the moderated group.

Sure but people find that contacts can be much more numerous and friendly on psk once they use it. I think it is better than voice in that respect. But I wonder how many wide side bands the new no-code op was generating ;-)? Well, he would have learned if this was a problem after the first few contacts with a friendly reminder from someone in the psk group.

Also, I have used a mike for psk plenty of times with VOC enabled...it works great (and has excellent airgap isolation) but you sometimes run into RRAP type radio nerds who tell you this is a violation of part 97 for improper use of SSB mode in the digital subbands. Just hold the mike to your PC speaker and it works fine and is technically the same thing as going direct from the soundcard except that there is an acoustic speaker-mike converter stage with an airgap that provides perfect electrical isolation.

>> Where is the irony you are trying to allege?

I missed that part. I would encourage no-coders to use psk mode; it can be easily set up homebrew from simple parts around the shack (nearly zero dollars in cost) and gets anywhere code can go...probably farther. It's just that a computer is required and it is not so easy to get PC's in the many poorer countries. psk usage may eventually convince no-coders of the useful simplicity of morse and its added contact potential for similar types of communications. But where would that leave the fierce missionaries of the no-code religious cult???

I Forgot...you can receive CW to some degree with a PC and the brain

Why not "three year old extras?" :-) No "age discrimination" is always the Rule with those guys.

"CQ CQ CQ dah dah goo goo..." :-)

New jargon in the ham bands? :-)

I'd like to meet Jim Weir sometime. Never have even though I've been very near his airport works while visiting Jim Hall, KD6JG. Jim Weir had his picture in the LA Times as one of a great number of Primary election candidates. He's a doer, not a diss-cusser like so many in here.

That's up to the NTIA...or perhaps the NRA. :-)

FCC might step in, perhaps, if the computer-control of rigs became commonplace. :-)

...meanwhile, awaiting some radio stuff...

1971. Let's Make A Slave

Editor's note: Willie Lynch, a slave-owner living in the West Indies, produced a handbook (similar to an "owner's manual" for products and goods we purchase and own) for use by slave-owners living in the United States. Willie Lynch's plan directly explains the process used to break the minds, bodies, and spirits of Black people during slavery. The long term, lasting effects of this "process" can be observed, even today, in the average African American and West Indian family structure. Lynch's systematic "seasoning" methods, explained in the text of "Let's Make A Slave," copiously details the seasoning process for enslaved Africans and their future generations. The language in this handbook directly reflects the tone of the author. The audience of the handbook viewed Black people not as human beings, but as property (goods) and a primary element in their successful long range economic plan.

'Let's Make A Slave'

The Origin and Development of a Social Being Called "The Negro"
By Willie Lynch

"The Black slave after receiving this indoctrination shall carry on and will become self re-fueling and self-generating for hundreds of years, maybe thousands."
Let us make a slave. What do we need? First of all we need a black nigger man, a pregnant nigger woman and her baby nigger boy. Second, we will use the same basic principle that we use in breaking a horse, combined with some more sustaining factors. We reduce them from their natural state in nature; whereas nature provides them with the natural capacity to take care of their needs and the needs of their offspring, we break that natural string of independence from them and thereby create a dependency state so that we may be able to get from them useful production for our business and pleasure.

CARDINAL PRINCIPLES FOR MAKING A NEGRO

For fear that our future generations may not understand the principles of breaking both horses and men, we lay down the art. For , if we are to sustain our basic economy we must break both of the beasts together, the nigger and the horse. We understand that short range planning in economics results in periodic economic chaos, so that, to avoid turmoil in the economy, it requires us to have breadth and depth in long range comprehensive planning, articulating both skill and sharp perception. We lay down the following principles for the long range comprehensive economic planning:

1) Both horse and niggers are no good to the economy in the wild of natural state.

2) Both must be broken and tied together for orderly production.
3) For orderly futures, special and particular attention must be paid to the female and the youngest offspring.
4) Both must be crossbred to produce a variety and division of labor.
5) Both must be taught to respond to a peculiar new language.
6) Psychological and physical instruction of containment must be created for both.
We hold the above six cardinals as truths to be self-evident, based upon the following discourse concerning the economics of breaking and tying the horse and the nigger together... all-inclusive of the six principles laid down above. NOTE: Neither principles alone will suffice for good economics. All principles must be employed for the orderly good of the nation. Accordingly, both a wild horse and a wild or natural nigger is dangerous even if captured, for they will have the tendency to seek their customary freedom, and in doing so, might kill you in your sleep. You cannot rest.

They sleep while you are awake and are awake while you are asleep. They are dangerous near the family house and it requires too much labor to watch them away from the house. Above all you cannot get them to work in this natural state. Hence, both the horse and the nigger must be broken, that is break them from one form of mental life to another, keep the body and take the mind. In other words, break the will to resist.

Now the breaking process is the same for the horse and the nigger, only slightly varying in degrees. But as we said before, you must keep your eye focused on the offspring of the horse and the nigger. A brief discourse in offspring development will shed light on the key to sound economic principles. Pay little attention to the generation of original breaking but concentrate on future generations.

Therefore, if you break the female, she will deliver it up to you. For her normal female protective tendencies will have been lost in the original breaking process. For example, take the case of the wild stud horse, a female horse and an already infant horse and compare the breaking process with tow nigger males in their natural state, a pregnant nigger woman with her infant offspring.

Take the stud horse, break him for limited containment. Completely break the female horse until she becomes very gentle whereas you or anybody can ride her in comfort. Breed the mare and the stud until you have the desired offspring. Then you can turn the stud to freedom until you need him again. Train the female horse whereby she will eat out of your hand, and she will train the infant horse to eat out of your hand also.

When it comes to breaking the uncivilized nigger, use the same process, but vary the degree and step up the pressure so as to do a complete reversal of the mind. Take the meanest and most restless nigger, strip him of his clothes in front of the remaining male niggers, the female, and the nigger infant, tar and feather him, tie each leg to a different horse faced in opposite directions, set him afire and beat both horses to pull him apart in front of the remaining niggers. The next step is to take a bullwhip and beat both the remaining nigger male to the point of death in front of the female and the infant. Don't kill him. But put the fear of God in him, for he can be useful for future breeding.

THE BREAKING PROCESS OF THE AFRICAN WOMAN

Take the female and run a series of test on her to see if she will submit to your desires willingly. Test her in every way, because she is the most important factor for good economics. If she shows any sign of resistance in submitting completely to your will, do not hesitate to use the bull whip on her to extract that last bit of bitch out of her. Take care not to kill her, for in doing so, you spoil good economics. When in complete submission, she will train her offspring in the early years to submit to labor when they become of age. Understanding is the best thing.

Therefore , we shall go deeper into this area of the subject matter concerning what we have produced here in this breaking of the female nigger. We have reversed the relationships. In her natural uncivilized state she would have a strong dependency on the uncivilized nigger male, and she would have a limited protective dependency toward her independent male offspring and would raise offspring to be dependent like her. Nature had provided for this type of balance. We reverse nature by burning and pulling one civilized nigger apart and bull whipping the other to the point of death--all in her presence.

By her being left alone, unprotected, with the male image destroyed, the ordeal caused her to move from her psychological dependent state to a frozen independent state. In this frozen psychological state of independence she will raise her male and female offspring in reversed roles. For fear of the young male's life she will psychologically train him to be mentally weak and dependent but physically strong. Because she has become psychologically independent she will train her female offspring to be psychologically independent as well.

What have you got? You've got the nigger woman out front and the nigger man behind and scared. This is a perfect situation for sound sleep and soundly, for out of frozen fear, his woman stands guard for us. He cannot get past her early infant slave molding process. He is a good tool, now ready to be tied to the horse at a tender age. By the time a nigger boy reaches the age sixteen, he is soundly broken in and ready for a long life of sound and efficient work and the reproduction of a unit of good labor force.

Continually, through the breaking of uncivilized savage niggers, by throwing the nigger female savage into a frozen psychological state of independency, by killing the protective image, and by creating a submissive dependent mind of the nigger male slave, we Have created an orbiting cycle that turns on its own axis forever, unless a phenomenon occurs and reshifts the positions of the male and female savages. We show what we mean by example. We breed two nigger males with two nigger females. Then we take the nigger males away from them and keep them moving and working. Say the nigger female bears a nigger female and the other bears a nigger male.

Both nigger females, being without influence of the nigger male image, frozen with an independent psychology, will raise their offspring into reverse positions. The one with the female offspring will teach her to be like herself, independent and negotiable (we negotiate with her, through her, by her, and negotiate her at will). The one with the nigger male offspring, she being frozen with conscious fear for his life, will raise him to be mentally dependent and weak, but physically strong...in other words, body over mind. Now, in a few years when these two offspring become fertile for early reproduction, we will mate and breed them and continue the cycle. that is good, sound, and long range comprehensive planning.

WARNING: POSSIBLE INTERLOPING NEGATIVES

Earlier, we talked about the non-economic good of the horse and the nigger in their wild or natural state; we talked out the principle of breaking and tying them together for orderly production, furthermore, we talked about paying particular attention to the female savage and her offspring for orderly future planning; then more recently we stated that, by reversing the positions of the male and the female savages we had created an orbiting cycle that turns on its axis forever, unless phenomenon occurred, and reshifted the positions of the male and female savages.

Our experts warned us about the possibility of this phenomenon occurring, for they say that the mind has a strong drive to correct and recorrect itself over a period of time if it can touch some substantial original historical base; and they advise us that the best way to deal with this phenomenon is to shave off the brute's mental history and create a multiplicity of phenomenon or illusions so that each illusion will twirl in its own orbit, something akin to floating ball in a vacuum.

This creation of multiplicity of phenomenon or illusions entails the principles of cross-breeding the nigger and the horse as we stated above, the purpose of which is to create diversified divisions of labor. The result of which is the severance of the points of original beginning's for each spherical illusion. Since we feel that the subject matter may get more complicated as we proceed in laying down our economic plan concerning the purpose, reason, and effect of cross-breeding horses and niggers, we shall lay down the following definitional terms for future generations.

1. Orbiting cycle means a thing turning in a given pattern.
2. Axis means upon which or around which a body turns.
3. Phenomenon means something beyond ordinary conception and inspires awe and wonder
4. Multiplicity means a great number.
5. Sphere means a globe.
6. Cross-breeding a horse means taking a horse and breeding it with an ass and your get a dumb backward ass, long-headed mule that is not reproductive nor productive by itself.
7. Cross-breeding niggers means taking so many drops of good white blood and putting them into as many nigger women as possible, varying the drops by the various tones that you want, and then letting them breed with each other until the circle of colors appear as you desire.

What means is this: Put the niggers and the horse in the breeding pot, mix some asses and some good white blood and what do you get? You got multiplicity of colors of ass backwards, unusual niggers, running, tied to backward ass long-hand mules, the one productive of itself, the other sterile. (The one constant, the other dying. We keep the nigger constant for we may replace the mule for another tool) both mule and nigger tied to each other, neither knowing where the other came from and neither productive for itself, nor without each other.

CONTROLLED LANGUAGE

Cross-breeding completed, for further severance from their original beginning, we must completely annihilate the mother tongue of both the nigger and the new mule and institute a new language that involves the new life's work of both. You know, language is a peculiar institution. It leads to the heart of a people.

The more a foreigner knows about the language of another country, to the extent that he knows the body of the language, to that extent is the country vulnerable to attack or invasion of a foreign culture. For example, you take a slave, if you teach him all about your language, he will know all your secrets, and he is then no more a slave, for you can't fool him any longer and having a fool is one of the basic ingredients of and incidents to the making of the slavery system.

For example if you told a slave that he must perform in getting out 'our crops' and he knows the language well, he would know that 'our crops' didn't mean 'our' crops, and the slavery system would break down, for he would relate on the basis of what 'our crops' really meant. So you have to be careful in setting up the new language for the slave would soon be in your house, talking to you as 'man to man' and that is death to our economic system. In addition, the definition of words or terms are only a minute part of the process. Values are created and transported by communication through the body of the language. A total society has many interconnected value system. All these values in the society have bridges of language to connect them for orderly working in the society. But for these bridges, these many value systems would sharply clash and cause internal strife or civil war, the degree of the conflict being determined by the magnitude of the issues or relative opposing strength in whatever form. For example, if you put a slave in a hog pen and train him to live there and incorporate in him to value it as a way of life completely, the biggest problem you would have out of him is that he would worry you about provisions to keep the hog pen clean, or partially clean, or he might not worry you at all. On the other hand, if you put this same slave in the same hog pen and make a slip and incorporate something in his language whereby he comes to value a house more than he does his hog pen you got a problem. He will soon be in your house.

More From Willie Lynch
Editors note: This speech was delivered by a white slave owner, William Lynch, on the bank of the James River in 1712. The concept in delievering this speech is very much like modern day "business workshops and seminars."

Gentlemen, I greet you here on the bank of the James River in the year of Lord one Thousand seven hundred and twelve. First. I shall thank you, the gentlemen of the Colony of Virginia, for bringing me here. I am here to help you solve some of your problems with slaves. Your invitation reached me on my modest plantation in the West Indies where I have experimented with some of the newest and still the oldest methods for control of slaves. Ancient Rome would envy us if my program is implemented. As our boat sailed south on the James River, named for our illustrious King, whose version of the Bible we cherish, I saw enough to know that your problem is not unique. While Rome used cords of wood as crosses for standing human bodies along its old highways in great numbers you are here using the tree and the rope on occasion.

I caught the whiff of a dead slave hanging from a tree a couple of miles back. You are not only losing valuable stock by hangings, you are having uprisings, slave are running away, your crops are sometimes left in the fields too long for maximum profit, you suffer occasional fires, your animals are killed. Gentlemen, you know what your problem[s] are; I do not need to elaborate, I am not here to enumerate your problems, I am here to introduce you to a method of solving them.

In my bag here, I have a fool proof method for controlling your Black slaves, I guarantee everyone of you that if installed correctly it will control the slaves for at least 300 hundred years. My method is simple. Any member of your family or your overseer can use it.

I have outlined a number of differences among the slaves: and I make these differences and make them bigger. I use fear, and envy for control purposes. These methods have worked on my modest plantation in the West Indies and it will work throughout the South. Take this simple little list of differences, and think about them. On top of my list is "Age" but it is there only because it starts with an "A"; the second is "Color" or shade, there is intelligence, size, sex, size of plantations, status on plantation, attitude of owners, whether the slaves live in the valley, on the hill, East, West, North, South, have fine hair, coarse hair, or is tall or short. Now that you have a list of differences, I shall give you an outline of action - but before that I shall assure you that distrust is stronger than trust, and envy is stronger than adulation, respect or admiration.

The Black slave after receiving this indoctrination shall carry on and will become self re-fueling and self-generating for hundreds of years, maybe thousands. Don't forget you must pitch the old Black male vs. the young Black male, and the young Black male against the old Black male. You must use the dark skin slave vs. the light skin slaves and the light skin slaves vs. the dark skin slaves. You must use thefemale vs. the male, and the male vs. the female. You must also have your white servants and overseers distrust all Black, but it is necessary that your slaves trust and depend on us, They must love, respect and trust only us.

Gentlemen, these kits are your keys to control. Use them. Have your wives and children use them, never miss an opportunity. If used intensely for one year, the slaves themselves will remain perpetually distrustful. Thank you, gentlemen.

Only in your dreams
D. Gibson/9
Music: "Only in my Dreams" D. Gibson 1987

Verse:
Every time Marqueer's telling secrets
He remembers how it used to be
And He kinda realizes how much he's outwitted
And He realizes how it feels to be brain-free

Everybody can see Markie's up to no good (No, no, no)
And He wants to spam again Can't remember when he felt good (he's a whining baby)
No He can't remember when

Chorus:
Marqueer whines "No, only in your dreams"
Morkie's an illiterate imbecile as it seems Markie's fucked up mind thinks he wins only in his dreams

Verse:
Marqueer see how much he missed the point (He never will) Couldn't see how much it meant Morkie's freakish world is tumbling down
Now Markie spams and his "mind" is bent

If I only once Marqueer could be smart (No, no, no)
And remember how it used to be
If only he could really flame you
And forget how it feels to be brain-free

Repeat Chorus

The new rec.radio.amateur.moderated news group is spam and flame free and is a much better place to ask your questions. If your news server doesn't carry rec.radio.amateur.moderated, you can go to Google Groups and post from there.

Sadly, posts to this news group are much less likely to produce useful results for you.

Recently while watching IMUS there was a commercial for some cellular service.

In the skit, a woman is frantically looking for her blackberry. Her coworkers enter, see her frantic, and smirk. Then, the phone rings -- it is in one of the co-worker's shirt pockets.

Cut to the next scene, where they're in the hospital, the guy has an ice pack on his head, and the woman text messages that he will be late.

The implication is the woman, upon discovering the dude hid her blackberry, whacked the dude on the side of the head.

Now, let's reverse the scene. Let's replace the woman with a man, and the man who hid the blackberry with a woman.

What would be the social outcry when the scene cuts over to the hospital and the woman is sitting there with a black eye?

Why is it socially acceptable to suggest violence from women to men is acceptable, but not vice-versa?

I place it all on the "simp-a-sizing" and "wimp-a-sizing" of American males.

Remember the "Jackie Gleason Series" skits and "TO THE MOON ALICE, TO THE MOON! :) Men have forgotten how to be men--so women have stepped up and replaced 'em. :(

Backpedal, Markie; backpedal.

Your original post said "no such respnse [sic] was ever made to me" period.

You didn't attach any conditions to it, and you denied that the statement had ever been made when the original poster quoted it.

That is a bald faced lie. Backpedaling won't do you any good, because most readers of this group are astute enough to remember exactly what you posted.

You're just a damned liar, Mark; that's all there is to it.

Perhaps. However, if it is socially unacceptable to suggest assaulting a

You should know Morkie, you perfected the art of spaming, cross

Marque. BIG difference between being accused and being guilty. You and spam-and-cheese are all to quick to accuse (and thereby imply guilt) while you go bananas whenever you are accused of spamming or abusing the newsgroups.

Yea, great content Morkie. You can't even articulate yourself clearly, follow a thread, or refrain from responding when someone is not even commenting to you.

clearly, follow a thread, or refrain from responding when someone is not even commenting to you.

Dloyd

Example: Last evening I made a post that took Mark three minutes to respond to. Other posts take less time before he changes the thread and responds four, five or six times...all a minute or two apart.
Obviously Mark and Gav spend little time together since his waking hours are spent hovering over the newsgroups.
I expect Gav to one day soon pack her bags and move on...

Nowhere did anybody "allege" that you stalked. What part of "or refrain from responding" do you not grasp?

Stop putting words in the mouths of others. It is a poor habit, and dashes any credibility you may have had on the rocks.

Well, it might say that in the bible alright, however, I can guarantee the "feeling" won't be good for a real man ... and, their may indeed be consequences to be paid elsewhere ... "youse' pays your money, youse'

Go forth and sin no more.

Whilst I cloak my identity as I did 2,000 years ago, would you deny my Father his due?

Thou knowest how to reach me. Look skyward, my Son.

Heavenly Father, please forgive Mark Morgan for his sins against You.
Truly, he knows not what he does as he walks in the shadow of Satan and sins against You.
Welcome this lost soul, Oh Father, into your fold as You did with the Lost Souls

Have pity, Of Father, upon his lifestyle as you bid him to enter your fold and welcome Jesus into his lonely soul.

Grant, oh Father, that Mark go forth and sin no more in the eyes of The Lord.

The new rec.radio.amateur.moderated news group is spam and flame free and is a much better place to ask your questions. If your news server doesn't carry rec.radio.amateur.moderated, you can go to Google Groups and post from there.

Sadly, posts to this news group are much less likely to produce useful results for you.

That's not true, UnWiseman. I've never had a run-in with law enforcement. I've never had mental problems. I successfully underwent a Federal security background screening and numerous periodic updates.

That's also incorrect. My wife also underwent a Federal background investigation and numerous updates.

Can't you find a second wife, Rog?

PKB doesn't apply, UnWiseman. I don't have a life consisting of posting filth to the internet.

Wheel "bearnings", is it? You might make a detective if you worked hard at it, UnWiseman. I just had a wheel "bearning" replaced. As it is, you're simply a private defective.

You must feel some inner need to confirm what anyone writes of you.

Think good thoughts about puppies and kitties, Rog, but try not to imagine people having sex with them. Back under the dresser with you, little cockroach.

Let me shock you with the facts. In the Hispanic world, many men are named "Jesus" (pronounced hay-sus). It's just about as common among Spanish men as Muhammed is among Muslim men.

So if you disapprove of someone calling himself Jesus, you are in fact a racist who disapproves of Spanish cultural traditions. Indeed, I always suspected that you were a racist, and now you have confirmed it.

Shame on you. Racism is especially ugly when it comes from a practicing Jew.

Let me shock you with the facts. In the Hispanic world, many men are named "Jesus" (pronounced hay-sus). It's just about as common among Spanish men as Muhammed is among Muslim men.

So if you disapprove of someone calling himself Jesus, you are in fact a racist who disapproves of Spanish cultural traditions. Indeed, I always suspected that you were a racist, and now you have confirmed it.

Shame on you. Racism is especially ugly when it comes from a practicing Jew.

Has the simple thought that if, IF, you didn't post your name and callsign, that most of the alleged off-line "harrassment" would never have happened in the first place?
Yet you, who should by now know better, have this odd buggaboo up your ass that you are being brave by posting your name, callsign, and, yes, even your twisted blog.
Do any of us feel sorry for you? No.
Did you bring much of this upon yourself by YOUR actions? Yes.
Perhaps if you were to cease flooding Usenet with your inane and oft unasked-for comments, your problems would cease. But that is too much to ask, and certainly well beyond your ability to comprehend.

Your case is further weakened when one looks at your ongoing exchanges with Woger at http://nimbusters.com/forum/forum.php?board=1

You, Mark, are merely reaping that which you have sown. You have earned it.

PARIS, France -- The French Open will award equal prize money to all women and men players across the board in all events, the organizers announced on Friday.

"It has been our objective since 2005. Last year, the first step was to award equal rewards to the winners of the men's and women's singles. In 2007, the parity will be total," said French Federation chairman Christian Bimes in a statement.

The French Open is the last of the four grand slam tournaments to make the move.

Prize money will total $20.33 million, an increase of 7.23 percent, with the winners of the men's and women's singles receiving $1,330,700.

"Its very good news for women's tennis and for women in general terms. As a Frenchwoman, I'm happy and proud the French Open organizers took such a decision," said France's number one Amelie Mauresmo.

WTA Tour chief executive Larry Scott said:"The decision by Roland Garros today closes one chapter in the history of tennis and opens an exciting new one that will positively impact opportunities for women and girls in sport and society."

Billie Jean King, a leading campaigner for equality, said equal prize money at the four Grand Slams "has now become a non-issue, and I couldn't be happier.

Worth the wait
"As we knew it would, it has taken several years to accomplish this goal, but it has been well worth the wait, and we salute the French Tennis Federation for taking this decisive and final step to equality," she said.

The move was also welcomed by Belgium's Justine Henin, winner of the French Open champion in three of the past four years.

"There is no tournament that I feel closer to than Roland Garros, which makes today's decision to treat the woman as equals very special to me personally," she said.

Hang on! Mark's former "residense" (now that has to have some Freudian significance) was burred, er...umm...burned? There was serious injury to either Mark and his father or Mark as his own father? His pets were killed? He can prove that Steve Robeson or his "conries" were implicated? That's some serious stuff.

Mark is utterly incapable of recognizing how the blog appears to others. No one would deliberately make himself look that foolish.

They might and they might not. Mark hasn't just presented himself as a perpetual victim, he has flooded this and other newsgroups with mindless drivel for quite some time now. The ill will that he has generated will not be quickly forgotten.

> But that is too much to > ask, and certainly well beyond your ability to comprehend.

The last clause in your statement sums it up. Mark cannot understand how he appears to others. It is totally beyond him.

Now you've done it! You've accused him of reap.

Mark has a long history in usenet as a congenital liar. We all know the entire drill by heart--the military lies, the year ago pagan now converted to Judaism lies, the marriage lies, the why-I-won't-use-a-spellchecker lies, the beat-me-hurt-me-pee-on-me lies. The guy has serious issues. They aren't as serious as Wiseman's personal demons, but he has issues.

I've had him killfiled for quite some time, but Thunderbird still shows his myriad squirrelly, grayed-out message headers.

Mark claims to be a <cough> "frequent poster" in rra.mod, but Steve has still made 180% as many posts to rra.mod. That would make Steve a "prolific poster" in Mark's distorted world and must make Mark feel like a failure. That's apparently why Mark has started playing catch up.

Let me hazard a guess. Steve's posts are clearly written and concise while Mark's are more of his usual gibberish.

So, Morkie went from being a Pagan to being a Jew? Or is he, as his blog claims, both? The thought occurred to me that Mark must be fairly twisted inside in order to be attending services at the temple while still maintaining that there is no God. Whatever the religion du jour is, Mark will never reach inner peace.
Who knows. Maybe next year Mark will be beating his empty noggin on the floor, rather than the wall he currently uses, five times a day while he begs Allah for forgivness for his unrightousness. And the year after? Maybe a saffron robe and Tibet will be the order of the day, but wherever he goes, you can rest assured that he will forever hear those nasty, Demon Voices in his head.

You know how Morkins stretches things (lies). I'm going to save his veiled accusations that Steve had something to do with the "burring" of his "residense", even though I doubt the conflagration happened. It is Mark's fantasy, so he can tell it however he wishes.
If a residence was indeed burned, I'm sure it was his father's, not his. And if indeed this happened, and IF it was arson, then I find myself wondering what Mark did to cause it. Who did he anger? Whose kid did he mess with? Why did he then flee to the upper peninsula? Hmmmm????
So many skeletons, so little time.

Indeed. He's merely trying to catch up to Steve's posts. It is his mission, his obsession.

Perhaps, JS, perhaps, but don't rule out the established infrastructure. Right after the 17 Jan 94 Northridge earthquake here, FEMA folks brought in a bunch of equipment doing pictures (in high speed, BTW) via satellite relay. One of those uses was a revolving pan around messages shown in video from way out of town...written in their own handwriting/printing.

HF ham bands have typical TOTAL bandwidths of 500 down to 100 KHz. Unless you've got some "4th dimension" gizmotchy (as yet unknown to the rest of technical mankind), ya just ain't gonna get much "high speed" on HF. The bandwidth just does NOT exist for what you want.

Now, if you have such a marvelous ultra-minimal bandwidth
"high-speed" modulator for HF, run, do not walk to the nearest California Auxiliary Communications Service office and offer it to them. It ain't all that far from Stockton to Sacramento. The ACS considers all forms of communications for disasters, big or small, and will be eager for input on miracle methods. Dinna wurra, laddie, if ya win the Nobel Prize for it, I will volunteer to write your acceptance speech in Swedish to deliver to KIng Gustav and all the others in Stockholm. [a pronunciation guide will cost extra, though]

Until then, amateur HF still has 60 to 300 WPM text data to send teleprinter communications, even en masse via packet. That DOES fit into the narrow confines of HF.
What is left of the telephone network after a major, major disaster can send limited-frame-speed video like what was done from Kuwait-Iraq in 1991, all over the low-resolution, narrow-band circuits on the telephone system.

I did NOT "do as I said years ago." Miccolis MANUFACTURED some life-enduring "promise" out of whole cloth, taking it well out of context at the time.

I did not seriously consider getting an amateur radio license until the 17th of February. That's the truth regardless of how others twist around old statements of mine. However, once
IN, I plan to stay in...until I decide to get out (if I do).

Once a REAL decision has been made, then one can work towards that goal with more attention. There is NO extra-special, genius (or genuous) level of knowledge required to pass those tests. All it takes is some attention-focused work.

Not "whining." It's a technical barrier to reach "high speed" approaching T1 rates on small slices of bandwidth. ALL radio services face that same problem.

If at least 1 MHz of the 10m band could be used - at the expense of ALL users of that portion of EM spectra, there would be a chance for at least NVIS propagation at high rates. That is NOT likely to happen for a minority of High Speed fans to go against the overwhelming majority.

Mere resistance to the establishment is NOT a "just cause."
One MUST justify that resistance in order to begin changing things. That justification is what the Students Wildly Indignant about Nearly Everything (SWINE) usually overlook.

For "high speed" (really medium-low speed), the commercial side of communications has developed the 56 KBPS modem that works on a 3 KHz bandwidth. That is starting to bump up against Shannon's Law, an extremely real technical barrier. [it doesn't exceed it but it is close enough to almost reach out and touch it...]

All electronics and radio works by the same Laws of Physics.
Those Laws are immune to the feelings, emotions, and general imprecations of mankind. One MUST learn those Laws and work WITH them in order to get them to work FOR you.

Len:

For all intents and purposes, 56K is HS for amateurs! I mean, sure it is well over decade behind, but most amateurs are far behind that!

Anyway, 56K on SSB should only consume ~1.5Khz, if SSB with 3Khz bandwidth is allowed--around ~100K can be expected. That will allow a megabyte to be sent in ~1.5 minutes.

Now a 1.5 megabyte map can show quite a bit of detail, especially in .JPG MONO format! That is MANY-MANY pages of the .TXT file--I mean, we are talking a BOOK!

Yanno, in a REAL MAJOR emergency you are going to hear a LOT of people asking, "What bandwidth rule?"

Only co-operation will be the mode of the day ...

Welcome to the new millennium, it has been a LONG time coming in these parts ...

You are overlooking the digital modes already available, for example, SSTV and Fax for images. Although not fast, how many pictures of the same item do you really need immediately for example? It is not going to be a hardship if it takes a couple of minutes for the image to transfer rather than a couple of seconds.

Text data (documents, instructions, directions, etc) are easily handled by error correcting modes now available. Granted these modes aren't used much but all the sender and recipient have to do is agree on which mode.

Depends on how hard up for power you are. In some cases, no problem.
In other cases, power will be so limited that you would only send the most urgent of messages.

To shape the future, we need to understand the abilities of the present. I'd suggest getting out there and working SSTV (ATV on UHF), packet, RTTY, PSK31, AMTOR, PACTOR (I, II, and III), Hellschreiber and the rest of the myriad "flavors" of digital out there. There is even a variant of PSK that includes some error checking. Learn first hand their strengths and weaknesses. Without this background, a developer will be handicapped in coming up with something better. If he is not knowledgeable on what is out there, he may end up "re-inventing the wheel." If he is not knowledgeable about the strengths and weaknesses of current modes, his new mode may end up having some of the same issues.

One can't just wave a magic wand and say "let it be so."

Remember: We finally got Todd Daugherty off the net (thanks to Hal Turner), and we can do the same to Mark Morgan. Satellite receiver jamming isn't beyond the range of possibilities that we're considering.
It only takes a low power transmitter to completely knock out a satellite receiver, and that can be done easily when necessary.

Join us in rec.radio.amateur.moderated for a full discussion of how and when we can put an end to Mark Morgan's net abuse.

Yes, like the "Model A" built by Ford, time to move up to new standards!
Surely time for the "Model B" anyway!

Well if you are that hardup for power, you darn well are NOT going to let some waste it hammering out CW for EXTENDED periods of time, transmitting data at LOW speeds or attempting to use voice and wasting BOTH time AND power!

To shape the future we need progressive people to deal with it, the old, the lame, the outdated, the slow, etc. must be moved aside. However, when it comes to "antique people" they can be quite stubborn and difficult to move aside! Gentle force must be applied ...

No, and we are working on the changes ... well, some are just arguing that all is impossible, not worth doing, or is a waste of time ... but

It is more productive if these progressive people understand the present methodologies and their strengths and weaknesses. The strengths need to be conserved and the weaknesses eliminated, hopefully without introducing new weaknesses.

Sometimes those "antique people" have valuable insights. Shoving them aside could actually be detrimental to the development of new modes.
They are the ones who have the experience to supply information on what weaknesses may need to be addressed. From a less altruistic point of view, they may be the ones to have the money to fund the progressive people.

Well, poking fun at "public personalities" is benign, criticizing those personalties is a duty as an American!, but true defamation of character is a totally different thing, if you have property, a home, savings, etc. and wish to risk 'em in a lawsuit, that is another matter ... go for it!

And, assuming anothers' REAL personality certainly smacks of MAJOR wrong doing!

In this particular subpost, I am not addressing any one mode per se.
I am discussing the issue of ignoring old methods and old people simply because they are old. Much is lost if one takes that approach.

Often the best results are obtained with a mix of the old and new and the synergy between new peopl and old people.

You are simply denying this possiblity.

As far as personal preferences go, the digital modes are of no interest to me. I've experimented with what's available so I can help the beginners get started. Hopefully one of these people will go on to develop the new and better modes that you want.

Perhaps so. However, I do know that the compacted mpgs, avis, etc that I download from the internet are large even when compacted and that's for short files. Files of several megabytes take minutes even on a high speed cable connection. I'd hate to think how that would slow down over an HF path with all the path noise, interference, static, etc. Afterall, error checking would be required for any critical messages.

I can believe you're a BS'er!

You repeatedly imply or outright state that this is simple. Well publish the software and algorithm. If you don't have the skills, find someone who does and get them to do it. Get it out in the public so people can give it a field trial. I'd be more than willing to try it out.

This is an area where we would be HAPPY to be proved wrong.

The so-called "naysayers" are simply pointing out the issues that must be considered and overcome to make this happen.

No one is advocating ignoring/dismissing/discarding "something" just because of age ... rather, the only way I would chuck technology is if it has outlived it usefulness ... however, a museum may be suitable for a WHOLE BUNCH of it!

There is really NO reason to develop anything to set a standard and start using efficient digital communications tomorrow ... as I have pointed out, Ogg Vorbis is open source code/algorithms, it offers excellent compression and is way more than is needed for mere speech. In fact, many open source utilities are already open to use/modification and suitable for adaptation to amateur needs ...

It is kind of like when Steve Wozniak and Steve Jobs founded desktop computing on a desktop sized computer--all the hardware was already there in place, most of the software existed as examples from other HUGE computers which were predecessors ... so is it here, set up a simple interface from sound card output to mike or line in on an xceiver and an interface from rig out to sound card line in, load up some software and off you go into digital speech--no einsteins needed, you can pull most everything off a shelf or download it from the internet (in the amateur tradition, would be nice if you knew enough to homebrew the interfaces!), get a high school/college programmer interested in your project--off ya go!

The nit-picking naysayers will keep attempting to chuck a stick in the spokes of progress, of course this does provide MAJOR HUMOR while SERIOUSLY degrading their credibility--use "stick chucking" at your own discretion!

JS

No, you most certainly did not. You made a boast over seven years back of going for an "Extra right out of the box". You did squat for those years.

It was not manufactured at all and was certainly not taken out of context. That you now find it embarrassing is the issue.

participate.

I don't recall a single Morse-tested Extra class licensee ever saying that the Amateur Extra was a mark of genius.

Many told you so. You usually dismissed them. You were told the same about learning Morse code.

Dave, how's that run for the Roanoke Division Director coming?

Instead of becoming Division Manager "Right Out Of The Box," you might want to try being a Section Manager first, and work your way up the ladder. I understand that your Section, West Virginia, will be having a run-off soon, so you might as well start now. After all, you have a finite time for eligibility and in which to participate. All it takes is some attention-focused work.

Best of Luck

* FCC says no commercial credit for prior military, ham radio,
experience:
The FCC has told a California radio amateur that it will not waive a commercial license application rule on the basis of his Amateur Radio Morse
code qualifications. Last April, Robert E. Griffin, K6YR, of San Luis Obispo, applied for an FCC First Class Radiotelegraph Operator's
Certificate
-- known as a T1 license -- requesting a waiver of §13.201(b)(1)(iv).
That rule says T1 applicants must have a year's experience "sending and receiving
public correspondence by radiotelegraph at a public coast station, a ship
station, or both." Griffin, who's ARRL Santa Barbara Section Manager and transmits the West Coast Qualifying Run on approximately 3.590 MHz, argued that the FCC should waive the rule because it's nearly impossible in an era
of the Global Maritime Distress and Safety System (GMDSS) to acquire the requisite experience and that the rule presented "an unreasonable
hardship
and a burdensome requirement." He sought credit on the basis of his military
and Amateur Radio radiotelegraph experience, including participation in the Military Affiliate Radio System, in lieu of experience at a public coast

station or ship station. In a letter
<http://hraunfoss.fcc.gov/edocs_public/attachmatch/DA-07-783A1.pdf>
February
22, the FCC said Griffin failed to demonstrate that the rule in question was
"inequitable or burdensome" insofar as all T1 applicants face the same requirement, and it denied Griffin's request. "A request for relief from the existing requirement of §13.201(b)(1)(iv) would better be addressed in a rule making proceeding, rather than through the waiver process," the FCC
allowed.

Dave,

Haven't you figured out Len's game yet?

It's really simple.

He plants errors in his posts, then argues with and derides some of those who point them out.
> >   MANUFACTURED

Here's a link to that posting of Jan 19, 2000:

http://tinyurl.com/c5qyv

And the famous quote:

LA> "I'm going for Amateur Extra "out of the box." "

"an old friend" knows what Len meant.

You know what Len meant.

I know what Len meant.

Anyone who understands plain English who reads that post knows what Len meant.

btw - more recently, Len boasted that he could pass the Extra with or without the Morse Code test. Since he waited until after the Morse Code test was eliminated,
it proved to be an idle boast.

> >   I did not seriously consider getting an amateur radio license
> >   until the 17th of February.

Note that Len does not mention which year!

I think he meant Feb 17 1999, soon after the Reply Comments to 98-143 closed. You know - the Reply Comments where he proposed a minimum age of 14 years for any class of Amateur Radio license.

> > That's the truth regardless of how > >   others twist around old statements of mine.

See? It's all other people's fault. Even though Len wrote:

LA> "I'm going for Amateur Extra "out of the box." "

way back then.

> I find it difficult to accept your claim as factual.
>
> >   However, once

Do you think Len has an HF amateur radio station of his own operational yet?

If he ever does set up a station, do you think it will be a state-of-the-art experimental station, mostly homebrew?

Or do you think it will be an assembly of off-the-shelf manufactured equipment?

> >   Once a REAL decision has been made, then one can work

I could have told Len that back in 1970, when I got my Extra in the summer between 10th and 11th grade.

Yup. Yet it took Len all those years to get his.

Not a one.

> >   All it takes is some attention-focused

How about that! Even with all of Len's PROFESSIONAL experience, it took work for him to pass the Extra.

I didn't think it was work at all, back in 1970. Nor now.
> Many told you so. You usually dismissed them. You were told the same > about learning Morse code.
Consider Len's game, Dave. He says he will do things, then doesn't do them. Like the way he said he would leave rrap when the Morse Code test was eliminated. Element 1 went away, but Len didn't.

Or he says things and then denies he said them. Then folks waste time pointing out his errors, and he gets to insult them for telling the truth.

Keep at it and he'll toss in the Byte Brothers quote and other insults.

Here's that link anc quote, again:

http://tinyurl.com/c5qyv

LA> "I'm going for Amateur Extra "out of the box." "

And he finally did - seven years later. Now he's finally a new radio amateur. A novice, beginner, tyro, tenderfoot, wet-behind-the-ears, just-out-of-the-box newbie to amateur radio.

Go a little easy on Len. He needs quite a bit of Elmering, I think.

Sorry, Rog. I can't give you the points. You didn't phrase your

Let's see. Hmmmm. Well now. I suppose that my wife would have to have such a background investigation done before she could marry someone who worked in my job position. I believe that's it! All foreigners who marry a State Department employee working in a sensitive position must undergo a thorough background investigation.

Popular sweetener is toxic for dogs
Updated 4h 2m ago
USA Today

By Sharon L. Peters, Special for USA TODAY
A sugar substitute found in a variety of sugar-free and dietetic cookies, mints and chewing gum is proving highly toxic, even fatal, to snack-snatching dogs.

Xylitol, popular in Europe for decades but a relative newcomer to the U.S. alternative-sweeteners market, can be "very, very serious" to dogs when ingested, says Dana Farbman, spokeswoman for the Animal Poison Control Center of the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

"It doesn't take a whole lot (of xylitol), and the effects are so rapid that the window of opportunity to treat the dog is extremely small," Farbman says.

The ASPCA sent an advisory to veterinarians last August warning them about the potential for serious harm or death. Veterinarians have used a variety of means to get the word out, including posting signs in their offices and making copies of the bulletin for clients to augment the caution the ASPCA has posted on its website.
Concerned that millions of people are still unaware of the risk, veterinarians with forums for widespread public announcements are spreading the word that way as well. Among them: Miami veterinarian Patty Khuly wrote about the problem on her doolittler.com blog, and Colorado Springs veterinarian Anne Pierce devoted her entire weekly newspaper column a week ago to xylitol.

Within 30 minutes of consuming a small amount of a xylitol-sweetened product, the ASPCA says, dogs can experience a dramatic drop in blood sugar, and they usually begin vomiting, become lethargic and can have difficulty standing or walking. Some have seizures, develop internal hemorrhaging and lesions and suffer liver failure. As few as two or three sticks of xylitol gum could be toxic to a 20-pound dog, the ASPCA says.

Immediate and aggressive veterinary treatment, which includes glucose drips and IV fluids, has proved effective in many cases.

The ASPCA's poison control unit is aware of 10 dog deaths from xylitol since 2002, and it has received scores of reports of dogs becoming gravely ill. But only a fraction of veterinarians and consumers alert the ASPCA when a dog becomes ill or dies from toxins, and there is no national clearinghouse tracking xylitol-suspected toxic reactions.

Moreover, it's not always entirely clear what caused the problem when a dog arrives at a veterinarian's office with seizures or liver failure. "I suspect that there are more cases than we know about because they come in with liver failure, and the owner is not aware of what has been ingested," Pierce says.

She believes that xylitol ingestion is "an emerging problem" and that the number of cases probably will increase with time, "depending on how widespread xylitol as a sweetener becomes."

Xylitol is an all-natural sugar substitute derived from beets, birch tree bark, corncobs and other natural sources. It's as sweet as sugar but has 40% fewer calories. Unlike sugar, xylitol does not require insulin to be metabolized.

Right now, xylitol is used mostly in cookies, candies, cupcakes and other sweets developed for people who have diabetes. It's also sold in bags of crystals for baking. Because of its bacteria-killing properties, it is put into some oral care products, including Tom's All Natural and Biotene toothpastes.

It also is beginning to be used in a broad assortment of products intended for the general public. Among them: Jello sugar-free puddings and a wide variety of sugar-free gums, including Trident, Orbit, Stride, Icebreakers and Altoids.

Makers of products with xylitol say their products are designed for people, including diabetes patients, who are seeking an alternative to sugar; they were never recommended for dogs and were never intended to be ingested by dogs. Owners should be careful because some dogs, Khuly says, "get into just about everything and eat everything they find."

There is no indication that any of the other sweeteners on the market adversely affect dogs. And there is no evidence so far that xylitol is toxic to pets other than dogs. But cats, for example, don't scavenge for sweets as dogs do, so it's possible there are risks that have not yet been discovered. For now, veterinarians advise pet owners to keep xylitol away from all animals.

Mark, please slow down on replies and try to think of what you wrote. Now, I'm fairly good at interpreting what was written, including intent, but that single sentence has me baffled.

I will repeat. RATE of information conveyed in ANY radio or wired communications service is a function of the comm circuit BANDWIDTH. That is a definite law of information theory.

Except for the amateur 10m band, the bandspace on amateur HF frequencies is LIMITED for any "high speed" (presumably Internet-quality data) communications.
That presents a technical barrier that is immune to human legislation, emotions, desires, whatever.

"High speed" information transfer is itself a subjective label. An adaptation of the common 56 KBPS method used by most modems might put such rates into US amateur radio but right now the regulations hold it to an equivalent 300 WPM rate. Now, to some that is "high speed." To someone selling DSL or "better" service it is very low speed.

Just saying "high speed" without quantifying it doesn't make it an argument pro or con. Saying one "must have high speed" isn't an argument or debate or discussion, it is just a troll, a phrase looking to be a flame war igniter.

well len when I first lloked in the thread i saw nothing but whining (indeed I still see plain whining /naysaying instead of real deabte such as deed in siting that discussing new modes means of course abonaning/banning older modes

many of the posters in this deabte are just whining or thinking it a zero sum game "we can't do anything new without banning something which is pure whine and pure BS

* FCC says no commercial credit for prior military, ham radio,
experience:
The FCC has told a California radio amateur that it will not waive a commercial license application rule on the basis of his Amateur Radio Morse
code qualifications. Last April, Robert E. Griffin, K6YR, of San Luis Obispo, applied for an FCC First Class Radiotelegraph Operator's
Certificate
-- known as a T1 license -- requesting a waiver of ?13.201(b)(1)(iv).
That
rule says T1 applicants must have a year's experience "sending and receiving
public correspondence by radiotelegraph at a public coast station, a ship
station, or both." Griffin, who's ARRL Santa Barbara Section Manager
and transmits the West Coast Qualifying Run on approximately 3.590 MHz, argued that the FCC should waive the rule because it's nearly impossible in an era
of the Global Maritime Distress and Safety System (GMDSS) to acquire
the
requisite experience and that the rule presented "an unreasonable
hardship
and a burdensome requirement." He sought credit on the basis of his military

and Amateur Radio radiotelegraph experience, including participation
in the Military Affiliate Radio System, in lieu of experience at a public
coast
station or ship station. In a letter
<http://hraunfoss.fcc.gov/edocs_public/attachmatch/DA-07-783A1.pdf>
February
22, the FCC said Griffin failed to demonstrate that the rule in question was
"inequitable or burdensome" insofar as all T1 applicants face the same requirement, and it denied Griffin's request. "A request for relief from the
a rule making proceeding, rather than through the waiver process," the
allowed.

Zzzzzz! Your musical tastes really suck. But not hard to understand

My, would you like some cheese with that whine?

Poor Davey, so sarcasm impaired along whith his many other disabilities.

Sure he could, sure he could.......The President always needed to know what was going on in the cashew capital of Africa during the cold war.....

Poor Davey. Seems like his accomplishments are only important when he can brag about them.

Too bad, the truth is she was.........a whore!

You seem to be projecting. It is a secrity concern if you marry a foreign national.

Yes you are sorry, you shouldn't watch too much "Jeopardy." But you don't have much else going on, worked any out of banders lately?

Let's see you contended she did go through a background investigation blame that person.

"velley?"

Poor Davey the stalker, he posts pictures of his house on the internet and when somebody uses them he gets his panties in a wad.

Poor Davey, stealing phrases from Glenn Beck. Oh, that's right, Davey is a Glenn Beck wannabe.

No, you just spell "valley" as "velley."

Of course, you don't. You can't see the correlation, stupid.

Proof that you can't think up anything better, wear that well, fatass.

to replace the replacement wheel bearings.
Oh, and stupid, "bearnings" was a typo.
Another you'd think is you'd think if you don't like reading somebody's posts, youd use a kill file or just ignore them. But that's just not your "style" is it, confrontational assheil?

It matches your yellow streak. Tell you what, Assheil, You figure out blood pressure up so easily.

Then we have the notorious stalker of other hams and one who whines to the cops over internet postings.
He's so internet savvy he doesn't know how to use a killfile for posters he doesn't want to read.

Hope so!

Sure he did, priests usually do, especially ones that were so scared shitless to go overseas during WW2.

You shouldn't use spray bought at Family Dollar, it's no good. You and Too bad your kiddie molesting father didn't wear any when he was

As usual, the square can't understand only what is in his mypoic view what is funny.

Can't be, the bugs in your whore wife's vagina is still infesting your bedsheets.

Heil made the announcement on September 7, 2006.

http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.amateur.policy/msg/eb0250faedaa0cf5?hl=en&

In another declaration, Heil said that people who cannot spell should not hold a position of leadership.

Shortly thereafter, I noted spelling errors in a Heil posting and made note of it.

Which is worse, making spelling errors, or working out-of-band Frenchmen on Six Meters?

Apparently, Heil thinks it's the former. I think it's the latter. In any case, Heil did both.

His run for the Roanoke Division Directorship is doomed.

I didn't say they were all planted.

But consider the one under discussion. Len wrote in January 2000 that he was going for Extra out of the box. No mention of waiting for the Morse Code test to be removed. Then he finally does it seven years and some days later.
All easily verified facts.

But then he says he did not do as he said he would do, years ago.

Why would someone put such an obvious and easily-disproved error into a posting here?

> >>> MANUFACTURED

It's really simple: Len wants others to do as he says, not as he does.

Actually, that's probably true.

Have you forgotten the post where I explained the basics of the psychological terms "projection" and "transference"?

Here's a handy link, for reference:

I do recall Len complaining that learning Morse Code was hard work for him. He claimed to have reached 7 or 8 wpm way back when.

Projection. Transference.

And after all that, he will complain about the 'filth' in a thread.

The Nim administrator said, "I have asked and asked for you guys to leave Steve's baby Michael off this board, yet you continue to post about him, so now you can find another place to post, good luck." And he shut it down.
Only the lowest of low-lives hang around that board anyway, but Roger and Mark somehow managed to sink even to the bottom of that sludge pit, thus proving, yet again, their complete and utter worthlessness.

"Consider that language a moment. 'Purposefully and materially supported hostilities against the United States' is in the eye of the beholder, and this administration has proven itself to be astonishingly impatient with criticism of any kind. The broad powers given to Bush by this legislation allow him to capture, indefinitely detain, and refuse a hearing to any American citizen who speaks out against Iraq or any other part of the so-called 'War on Terror.'

"If you write a letter to the editor attacking Bush, you could be deemed as purposefully and materially supporting hostilities against the United States. If you organize or join a public demonstration against Iraq, or against the administration, the same designation could befall you. One dark-comedy aspect of the legislation is that senators or House members who publicly disagree with Bush, criticize him, or organize investigations into his dealings could be placed under the same designation. In effect, Congress just gave Bush the power to lock them up." -- William Rivers Pitt

"It has become clear in recent months that a critical mass of the American people have seen through the lies of the Bush administration; with the president's polls at an historic low, growing resistance to the war Iraq, and the Democrats likely to take back the Congress in mid-term elections, the Bush administration is on the ropes. And so it is particularly worrying that President Bush has seen fit, at this juncture to, in effect, declare himself dictator." -- Frank Morales

I don't believe that a really deranged individual would be the one to make such a judgement, UnWiseman. You haven't touched base with reality in quite some time, nutball.

>> You, on the other hand are what you write.

Fine. The very next time I bitch at Len Anderson, I'll remember that you are what you write. You aren't trying to place yourself in Len's category, are you? Len is windy, pontificating and insulting, but he isn't crazy. He doesn't post filth, Roger.

> Of course, you'll have to get a new line about him not being a player

Len is indeed a radio amateur. I don't believe he'll ever be in hot water over QRMing anyone on the bands. I don't believe he'll ever be required to retest. I don't believe he'll ever have problems with his local police or sheriff's department.

The point just whooshed over your empty noggin, Rog.

It's probably better to argue with folks than to play anonymous and write about them having sex with their parents, children or pets, don't you think? That seems to be the kind of thing that trips your trigger.

Your local police are quite interested in the things you post, Rog. They invited me to forward your more fantasic posts to them. I'm quite happy to oblige.

That's six individuals. That isn't very numerous. According to you, Roger Wiseman doesn't post here. None of the others post filth. I don't post filth directed at them.

school. Len Anderson passed an amateur radio licensing exam.

He passed, UnWiseman. It took him decades. It took more than seven years after he boasted that he do so "right out of the box", but he passed it. Be happy for him.

You obtained an amateur radio license. Look what you've done with it.

I've not mentioned my musical tastes. Make it a project. See if you can find out what kind of music I like. Keep the info with the other classified information you've gleaned--the car color, the high school job and Len Anderson passing an amateur radio licensing exam.

Maybe he did; maybe he didn't. The fact remains, he could have called me anytime he wanted to discuss anything. Do you know how many Cubans

I know how to use a killfile. That'd be like installing window blinds

That's nearly correct. You are a notorious stalker of hams and others

The bipolar admin of that board reopened it, and now Woger can stop sobbing uncontrollably. He and "Mark in the Dark" can continue their war of pidgin words back on board one instead of adding to the din in this group.

Maybe hot-eggs-and-spam can join in the fun. Send him an engraved invitation, Mark; he'd be a natural there.

In message <460958efdfed53d39cf6e878fe497940@userbeam.net>, Secwet Woger bragged about his Extra Class examination fame with the claim: "If poor chronic alcoholic and drug abuser Gopher face wouldn't drink so much because he is womanless, he could spell 'retested', 'dumb' and 'Rogie' and could actually pass an Extra license exam."

Comparing CW to digital signals and digital communication is much the same to comparing a toboggan to the space shuttle and claiming both are methods of transportation.

Re: ARRL's "Diamond Terrace" Memorial

I do NOT understand this "fad" of placing bricks on the GROUND to memorialize someone. I am not about to memorialize anyone about whom I care or whom I respect by placing their name on the ground where thoughtless people wipe dog-poop off their shoes and spit their gum. I don't know who first thought of this fad (and Lord, I hope it's a "passing fad"), but it's a bad idea and I would never, ever do it.
Build a wall with the bricks, or anything else
other than a "walk on you daddy" place.

I would be much more worried about the "hucksters" at arrl attempting to sell ya bricks at $75-$250 bucks.

Guess their little "religious pamphlets" just aren't going like hotcakes! Guess their just ain't an appeal for the arrl amongst "atheist hams!"

Maybe we should worry more about "arming" the arrl with a generous supply of bricks, what happens if they get PI$$ED and start hurling 'em?

We'll see.

The nomination period is open for the Roanoke Division Directorship, and he's already announced his candidacy.

Now we must wait/see if he has enough local support or if he must selfnominate.

Then the ARRL might accept or deny his nomination - conflicts of interest and such. You know the drill.

Then there's the all important election, if he had a campaign...

If elected, will he acceptor decline the position? ... to spend more time with his family.

Well, he IS an olde-tymer and a morseman. I doubt if there will be any close-order drill involved. Should not be a problem for one of the "old school" in hamateur raddio.

A "solo oligarchy!" :-)

The old Greeks would approve...maybe. The original representative government-congress model for the rest of the world (of the Vikings and roughly preserved in Iceland) called the 'allthing' would not.

One doesn't mess with Vikings. :-)

No...it is supposed to be a "playground" according to N2EY. [see RRAM recent post] :-(

Actually, it is just a small money-income-producing scheme by MY amateur radio organization (I joined) disguised as a "memorial."
NOT a good choice in my opinion.

I side with David Stinson: Make it a WALL, something that is upright, something one can be eye-to-eye with. NOT something to look down upon or to walk over.

But, putting callsigns on the bricks? Some of those callsigns are (and have been) reassigned to later, living radio amateurs by the FCC. What then? As time progresses more of that will happen and all amateur radio license grantees do NOT "own their calls."

Someone at the ARRL (perhaps a cardinal in the Church of St. Hiram?) got delusions of grandeur when trying to gen up some extra cash inflow. They should have thought SERIOUSLY about it beforehand.

"LIke" the Vietnam Memorial in DC? Good Lord! Amateur radio is NOT MILITARY SERVICE and NO ham has to put their LIFE into defending the Constitution of the ARRL! :-(

There's no reason to get uptight about it as no one has to do this. Let those who want to do so. Those who don't like it are not compelled to participate.

I wouldn't do it myself but I see no harm in others doing so.

Many of us cherish the Memorial. You, apparently, do not.

You have no friends' names engraved upon The Wall. I do.
You don't know what a Combat Infantry Badge requires. I do.
You've never parachuted from an aircraft. I have.
You've never been to The Wall. I have.

Please, leave the Vets' memorial out of your mindless meanderings.

Actually, some ninnies abandoned this newsgroup. In the end, I don't see that they did much to try to improve the place, they just decided to go behind the shield of moderation.

What you are creating is cause, rather than effect. Steer people elsewhere and of course this newsgroup is abandoned. But that's because the only people left are the junk posters. When there's nothing to respond to, since you are trying to steer people away, then that kills the newsgroup.

Follow-up to a letter I received:

----- Original Message -----

Subject: RE: Diamond Terrace

Thank you kindly for your reply.

> A brick terrace (not a walkway or side walk) of this type are used > extensively by many universities and organizations for this purpose and it

If my understanding is correct, names will be on bricks which are to be walked upon. That many people participate in this latest fad in memorials does not make it a "good" practice.
Millions of people smoke. That does not make smoking "good."

I'm happy to report that, at least in some quarters, this practice is being rejected and the bricks are being used in creative, attractive fashions that do not include teenagers wiping filth off the bottom of their shoes on the name of your loved-one.

Placing the name of someone we claim to respect under the unavoidably dirty heel of passing observers simply begs credulity;
I am astonished that anyone finds this acceptable and, frankly,
I think it has it's roots in worshiping the false "heroes" of Hollywood and their "Walk of Fame." I find it fitting in Hollywood's
case, but not for my Elmer (or my father, or anyone else
I respect). Basing something as meaningful as the memorial you propose in something as meaningless as Hollywood defiles the very idea of a memorial.
You folks will, of course, do as you please.
And I'm nobody.
But I'm a nobody who's going to speak out against this terrible dirty-ing of people we claim to value.

It likely will, UnWiseman. Most cars eventually need new brake pads and/or shoes. Doesn't your car ever require them?

I'm not getting any free tower, Rog. I'd accept free Rohn 25 if offered. Do you know of some free tower available in the area?

I don't know the man, Rog. The only things I know about him is what has been strewn about various newsgroups. You seem interested in such things. You often write of people having sex with their children.

My wife never worked in such endeavors, UnWiseman. You're fixated on such things. Does the idea get you aroused?

>Is she still appling that Vagisil to her mouth?

Appling? Why would someone misapply such a product? Where do you get your strange ideas?

Think nice thoughts about summer days, picnics, strawberries and clouds, Roger. Take your medicine and keep calm.

[The final line says in rot13: "Prediction: This will be hijacked in spite of its null content."]

Now Mark has demonstrated to one and all that he is a liar. Mark said that he doesn't hijack posts which don't attack him, but he just attacked a post which didn't even mention Mark or say anything to attack him. It was a nonsense post.

Mark hijacked the subject anyway, thereby demonstrating his total dishonesty. That was the reason the post was put here in the first place, and Mark fell for it.

Never claim that you only hijack attack threads, Mark, because that has now been proven to be a bald faced lie.

Thanks for taking my lie detector test. You failed it utterly.

Have you ever gone through the trouble to install any version of this over rated operating system, whose only advantage is that it may save you $99, only to find it's utility is less advanced and not as nearly supported as win 95 from 12 years ago? No? You never heard of linux? Thought so.

I've done very well musically, Rog. Take the results from your morning (yellow car, worked at Sears, cars need brakes).

Addressing them? "I'm not gay" is addressing them? "You're a guy obsessed with homosexual acts" is addressing them? You'll note that I've made no reference to you engaging in homosexual activity with a parent or sibling or any other.

Yeah, Rog. It likely will. I've had to replace brake pads on other vehicles I've owned. Why would my current car be different? Take your you've gleaned from my web page and from careful monitoring of local

I asked if the idea aroused you. You get yourself worked into a froth. You often bring up the subject of people in homosexual acts, folks having sex with their parents or children or animals. Using your logic, that must mean that you do engage in such things, have engaged in such things.

One has only to go up a few lines in this message to see the difference between us, Rog. You need professional help. I'm sure that your medical doctor, a minister or the county Board of Health could find you some assistance.

I know you do. That's one of the indications of your mental state. You're a sociopath.

> And do thake that medicine you have to take, fatass. Preferably not.

For goodneth thake, UnWiseman, I do take blood pressure medication. Taking it doesn't result in my becoming unglued any more than not taking it. High blood pressure doesn't result in psychotic episodes.

Seek help. I'd really prefer it if you did take your medications. I don't wish you failed brakes, taking a header through a windshield or death which can be prevented. I think you'd be better off in a place where they'd look after you to keep you from harming yourself or others.

Keep "appling".

I installed the free redhat fedora distribution and found that only basic applications were supported (like going back to windows 1.1). I had to re-partition my hardfile without reformatting the drive so I had to get cracked copy of partition magic from IRC sources. I never was able to get my hardfile back in shape. The whole experience was bad. Now we have this ham giving away linux versions of basic digital modes and we call that advanced. I am pro-code but the fact that the author of these linux programs is a 20wpm coded ham does seem to validate the no code position that coders are stuck in the past...like pre win-95.

How about this one:

Q. How many no-coders does it take to change a lot bulb?

A. None. They don't change it because it takes too much work.

That means they are just as trashed mouth and ignorant as you, and if they were pro-coders as you say, you would not be hearing anything but dits and dahs, dum dum. Real pro coders use CW, and do not hang out on 75 meter phone with those miscreants (Mark, first of all its not 80 meters, its 75), but it figures that you would be attracted to that sort of atmosphere or think that all procoders are just like those people. I guess using your rationale I can stereo type all nocoders and say all nocoders can't spell, feel they are being stalked, they are jewish, bi-sexual, and a pagan.

I've been to the Wall. For all the controversy generated when it was designed, and built, it is perhaps the most fitting and dignified memorial out of all the memorials I've seen. Sobering. Nothing to stop you in your tracks like watching someone bawling their eyes out reading the names of their lost buds or making a tracing of the same.

Keep it out of the stupid arguments in this group.

Here is a prime example of you twisting things around. I never said that you shouldn't answer post unless they are addressed to you. What I said was that you shouldn't reply to posts that are directed to SOMEONE ELSE, as an example would be if I and Stafan Wolfe was in direct dialog discussing some topic through the board and then you decide to chime in with some irrelevant information. In this case, the original thread was not directed to anyone, except the group as a whole, whereas anyone can respond because no dialog had been borne of this post, but as many threads spur dialog between two people on certain points and turn into a conversations between two or more people, it best to let that play out and not interfere, unless you can actually add something to the discussion. However, in your case, whereas two people are have a discussion throught the board, you want to chime in and say 'Just another stalking thread" or "only in your dreams woger" thus hijacking the thread. This is prime example of why rational people cannot reason with you because you twist things around. Instead of admitting that you have problems with comprehension and logic, (which frequently is manifested in individuals that also have dyslexia), and ask for understanding from the group. You think we are all stalking or harrassing you. Then in turn you seem to want to punish the group for your problem.

That Mark is why so many people just get tired of your bull and go on the attack. Like I've said before, if you didn't act like and a-hole all of the time, hijacking almost every thread, maybe someone would treat you with respect.

You didn't have to say they were procoders, you impled such in your topic header. You indicated that you are wondering why procoders would dare to critize your language here on RRAP, when someone on 80 meters is using foul language. You could of said "why would someone critize your language on the NG when people are using foul language on the air." But you specifically included "procoders" in your topic implying that the people you were monitoring are also procoders, in essence implying some sort of double standard, when in fact none exists. Furthermore, two wrongs don't make it right, just because some choose to use language that is inappropriate on the air does not mean that you should do so here, in this forum.

I didn't say that you said anything and in dealing with you it more nightmarish than a fantasy.

You impled as much as explained above, and stop being redundant. Ask anyone on the group to read the thread, most will agree that this is a desperate plea for attention flame post, that has nothing to do with radio, or the groups. I can't understand why you feel it is necessary to use foul language. Your not in grade school, it is not "cool" to use foul language most of the time, it only distracts from your credibilty.

Since rec.radio.amateur.moderated's creation, there have been just shy of 200 posts.

Mark posts 200 messages in a day to this newsgroup.

If he's wondering about "poor behavior", he should first look in the mirror, rather than look on 75 meters.

These are the number of current, unexpired FCC-issued amateur radio licenses held by individuals on the stated dates, and the percentage of the total number of active licenses that class contains.

Percentages may not add up to exactly 100.0% due to rounding.

These totals do not include licenses that have expired but are in the grace period, nor do they include club, military and other station-only licenses.

Effective April 15, 2000, FCC no longer issued new Novice, Technician Plus and Advanced class licenses, so the numbers of those license classes have declined steadily since then.

Also since April 15, 2000, FCC has renewed all existing Technician Plus licenses as Technician.
It is therefore informative to consider the totals of the two classes, since the Technician class includes a significant number of Technician Plus licenses renewed as Technician.

On February 23, 2007, the last Morse Code test element, the 5 wpm receiving test, was eliminated as a requirement.

The ARS License Numbers:

As of May 14, 2000:

Novice- 49,329 (7.3%)

Mike Deignan will attest to that.

I realize that every organizations needs cash-flow to operate, but maybe callsign police badges would be a better way to go.

What's going to happen when the ARRL decides to remodel and the bricks end up at the landfill?

His actions and Riley's are a matter of public record, so we don't need Mike to attest.

Future hams and ham families will flock to Newington, placing scraps of paper over the brick and etching the callsign for posterity.

Operating a ham radio in the ARC basement is the moral equivalent of military service.

That means they are just as trashed mouth and ignorant as you, and if they were pro-coders as you say, you would not be hearing anything but dits and dahs, dum dum. Real pro coders use CW, and do not hang out on 75 meter phone with those miscreants (Mark, first of all its not 80 meters, its 75), but it figures that you would be attracted to that sort of atmosphere or think that all procoders are just like those people. I guess using your rationale I can stereo type all nocoders
and say all nocoders can't spell, feel they are being stalked, they are jewish, bi-sexual, and a pagan.

By the way, speaking of being a hypocrite, you need to look in the mirror.

How can you lust after men and supposedly be married/commited to a woman?

It seems that you will always be a hypocrite, an extreme hypocrite.

Mark, see how your twisted logic works.

Prove where I have lied. You like to make your stupid accusations, but yet you do not offer one iota of proof. Mark, no one can have a discussion with you because of your apparent low IQ, I honestly believe that you suffer from BIF, it must be really hard going through life suffering from so many mental impairments. Your wife must have been hard up to have married a fat balding mental patient. I guess she though her biological clock was ticking away and went into a panic to get married. Any pregnancy yet? I know Gav was hoping for kids.
If you can't get the job done, maybe Woger can help you out.

You've been listening to 75 meters not 80 meters.
Check Part 97:

80 meters is 3.5 to 3.6 MHz, and no voice modes are allowed.

75 meters is 3.6 to 4.0 MHz, which is almost all voice modes.

Also, note what modes the folks you hear are using.
It's not Morse Code!

It will be most interesting to see the final tally for March in another week.

Thusfar, all that has appeared to happen is a huge number of upgrades from Tech to higher license classes.

I'm still waiting for the "flood" of technically-savvy people who would 'get licensed but can't/don't want to/(insert excuse here) pass the torturous/nasty/evil/oppressive/(insert adjective here) code examination

204 additional posts have been found for the month of March under the address konstans@... That brings the total posts found so far up to 1263.

I am posting these results as I develop scripts to go through the news cache and count posts by kb9rqz under his various nyms. These results will continue to be periodically posted here as proof of Mark's Usenet and Google abuse.

Mark define "them", your fourth grade level responses are not very articulate. If you are going to respond, at least you could write in a manner that adequately addresses the post, not with little short snipits. Unless of course you low IQ prevents you from authoring an adequate response, you may ask for consideration in light of your BIF (borderline intellectual functioning). Once again you have failed to show adequate proof of where I have lied. Now you accuse me of "making accusation and you never back em up." Provide an example of where I have done what you say, unless of course you have not proof whatsoever. I have provided examples of your behavior and have had some success in finally getting you to admit the truth.

At one time you indicated that you never lie and you don't hijack threads.

But recently, you finally admitted to doing both of these behaviors, the truth will set you free.

Notice how Mark always plays the innocent victim. He is so twisted, it appears that Mark can't even determine that his posting behavior is inappropriate.

Mark, How did I thread jack? The thread is about you, and I posted about you. I can't thread jack this post because you hijacked this thread when you changed the name on the second post. Larry's post that I was responding to was not directed to an individual, hence no name mentioned, but I put a name in this post so others will know that it is directed at you. Now watch me restore the original name, now don't thread jack it again. But of course you will

2684. kb9rqz posting stats for March III (1389 posts counted)

Newsgroup: rec.radio.amateur.policy
Date: 2007-03-24 19:36:45 UTC
From: Larry <ljones23@no.spam>
Message-ID: <8701eff7833.2458F8789@tarrnews.net>
Source record: 187736
Cross-posted to: rec.radio.amateur.policy,rec.radio.amateur.misc

I have now found other nyms Mark uses, such as "General Pace" <konstaan@hotmail.com>, and included them in my counting scripts. When the scripts scan the news cache for the month of March 2007, they now come up with

rec.radio.amateur.misc - 499
rec.radio.amateur.policy - 823
alt.radio.scanner.flame_fest - 67

Total: 1389 unique posts

Crossposts have only been counted once and assigned to the first newsgroup listed in the Newsgroups line. For example, a post crossposted to both rram and rrap is counted only once and assigned to rram. That is also the way in which the files are saved internally by the news server, and that is the reason flame_fest is included (all posts counted there were also crossposted to rrap or rram but were not counted in those groups).

Mark's March posting frequency is approximately 58 posts per day.

Next, I'll be working out such things as the maximum number of posts on any given day. I know that during some months the daily frequency has approached 200 posts per day.

lol

Perhaps a website similar to Speroni's, only showing Mark's posting frequency per day per month, with Bar Graphs and the like?

My plan is to post the totals once per month, on or about the 22nd.
Those posts, like this one, will include totals for the first, 14th and 22nd of each month (or thereabouts).

I disagree!

The total number of US hams had been slowly declining for a couple of years before the rules change. Since the rules change, the decline has stopped and we have a growth rate of about 1/3 of one percent per year.

Of course that's based on one month of data. Whether the trend will continue is unknown. Extrapolating one month's results may not be valid at all.

When the rules changed in 2000, we had a couple years of growth - and then the numbers peaked about 2003.

When the "price" of something declines, there is usually a surge of "sales", which may or may not be sustained.

Don't hold your breath.

Consider our resident "retired from regular hours radio-electronics PROFESSIONAL" who finally got his license out of the box.

Do you think he'll be homebrewing any radios for his amateur station?
Writing any technical articles for amateur radio publications or websites?
Using any new modes or methods?

And hey, Mike - you are part of that NoCodeTest agenda, too! I read your 1998 Comments.

Thru the end of February, we saw a decline of 32,383 hams (687,860, 04/03 to 655,477 02/07) in 3.83 years. That's a decline of 8455 hams/year on average, or 704/mo for the past 46 months. During that time period, we also saw a few 'statistical outliers' where the number of licensed hams temporarily increased for 1 or more months (for example, Nov 03, Aug 04, Sept 05) but then the downward trend continued. A final March tally of 1/3rd of 1% would be consistant with prior blips.

687,860

There's an old saying I teach my statistics students: One observation does not equal a trend. However, I think my 0-1% decline prediction will hold true in the end.

Like I've always said, the numbers game is a losing proposition for amateur radio. It is in our interest to focus on quality over quantity.

No, I got kicked out when Carl Stevenson had my No-Code International membership revolked because he didn't like me and my postings to RRAP. Now I'm a No-Code Gypsy, wandering around without a home.

I'll take you at your word. There are eight of those posts, all of which were posted through AOL. That leaves 1385 posts to explain (as of this time / date).

In fact, I'll assume that any AOL post is a fake and cut them out of the tally. I'll have to add a line or two to the script file in order to take a look at the NNTP-Posting-Host line and eliminate such posts.

> there are severl dozen look kida alike addies being used by other to Care to list their ISPs? I can go ahead and eliminate them too. That's still going to leave a lot of posts that look like yours (right NSP, ISP and news reader).

Tera News is a rogue NSP which has been under active consideration for the Usenet Death Penalty because of all the spam which originates there (see news.admin.net-abuse.usenet). If the news server admins ever decide to take action, Tera News will be cut off from the rest of Usenet and that will be the end of that.

Google, schmoogle: It is a matter of simple common sense and netiquette. When you intentionally disrupt ANY newsgroup for long periods of time, you are by definition an abuser.

Mark has no common decency, and is indeed incapable of same. His mental issues lie much deeper than meets our eyes, as is evidenced by his odd obsessive/compulsive behavior.
You may as well be talking a tree, for all the good it will do. It is no

Hi Jim

as a question of curiosity, why do you insist on that 75/80 meter distinction? ARRL uses 80 meters to refer to the whole band, my radios don't diffeereentiate between the two bands, and the other bands certainly aren't accurate as far as wavelength compared to our reference names for them.

And I suppose if we're being precise, it is actually the 84.449/78.893 meter bands. We could always round it to 84/79 meters 8^)

Why receive gifts? Gav refuses to live with you, she won't take your name, and you spend your waking hours on Usenet. Some would be led to believe that you aren't even married...legally, that is. Of course perhaps your "artsy-craftsy" crowd of self-proclaimed artists and wanna-be performers feel that all you need to do is proclaim that you are married while dancing around a bonfire in front of a few spaced-out pot smokers.
You've lied about so much already that it is small wonder nobody believes
you.

Couple of reasons.

One is that, for much longer than I've been a ham,
"75" meant the 'phone subband and
"80" meant the CW/data subband.

But the big reason is that the FCC calls them "80" and "75" the same way
I did.

Is FCC wrong?

If you told Riley Hollingsworth that you heard objectionable stuff on 80 meters, where would he think you meant?

Not raving about anything, you posted that you have so many friends, but your wedding registry appears to suggest otherwise. You had about 40 items on the wish list and only received four and one duplicate, and it was all the cheap gifts. So the registry suggests that you have about four friends, who are a bunch cheapscapes. I usually give a $1000 for weddings whether I attend or not. Your friends must be a bunch of cheap asses.

Most of his "friends" are the voices he hears in the dark corners of his mind. The others, the ambulatory ones, are a few starving artists living on shoestrings and locally grown pot.
Perhaps Mark shoud have asked for a bong pipe instead.

You know how Mark is. He often fabricates "rules" and draws his own "lines in the sand" depending upon his mood.
I rather enjoy watching him wig out. Apparently Gav is once again not home to soothe his savage soul.

I wonder what she did with those "wedding" gifts? Did she take them to her house, or leave them at Mark's father's house? Ah, heck. It is not important.

His wife has posted all kinds of crap on the net, I just use a lot of the off the wall seach engines which seems to be better at finding the more out of the ordinary crap on the net. Mark thinks I somehow hacked into his wife's account, but he is too stupid to realize that none of that information is protected. He really is a "Super Idiot

Well they only got a couple of cheap knife sets and some artsy fartsy books. Maybe Markie will get one of the knife sets out and fall on it.

The knives may serve a useful purpose, indeed. The books will be of little use to Mark since Gav will most likely take them from Mark before he colors
all the pictures with his collection of Crayons.
I wonder if Mark is bouncing off the walls yet? You've apparently put his Okay, but just what band are they a sub band of?

Is the ARRL wrong? Frankly, I think the whole argument is a little specious. The 80 meter wavelength is indeed in the phone sub band.

So while the FCC might be right in the way that the boss is always right, and when they are wrong, they are right.

> If you told Riley Hollingsworth that you heard

I suspect that he would ask me about what was happening, the mode, and a few other relevent questions instead of draw a assumption based on an erroneous figure of speech.

Here is my take on the whole situation.

Considering that the 80 meter wavelength is in the phone sub band of the amateur frequencies from 3.5 MHz to 4 MHz, we are dealing with a standard that some Hams use that is in error. It is simply wrong to call the CW sub band 80 meters when it isn't 80 meters, if accuracy is any goal.

That being said, I understand the meaning of a statement when a ham is talking about being on 75 or 80 meters. But correcting him or her for what is an innacurate convention held by some Hams might be a little premature. It might be a good thing to ask is he or she was indeed listening on 3.747 MHz, before admonishing them for being inaccurate. And I also understand when they speak of 80 meters and refer to phone operations.

Otherwise we end up like that Australian poster who comes on to flame us about using meters instead of metres... 8^)

Odd. I was under the distinct impression that he's already been lobotomized.
Of course I have no knowledge whether he has or not, I was merely judging by You've obviously succeeded in working him into a pitched frenzy. I see that he is responding en masse and is jacking the threads once again.

I will not look at his posts, since once you've read one, you've read them all.

Besides. When one ignores his posts he takes it as a personal affront. He NEEDS attention, seeks it out whether good or bad. I'm sure he is thinking, "How dare they ignore me?"

Now, Dloyd, you will keep poor Mark up well past his bedtime.

Could be, although considering his age he could have adult onset drug abuse hysteria. Between ages of 35 and the late 40's, a lot of males who have used illicit drugs during their teens and early 20's end up with severe mental condtions due to a chemical imbalance in the brain that occurs during normal age related changes in the brain. In a normal person these changes occur without little notice, but in a drug abuser, it cause severe mental problems when the change occurs, consistent with Mark's behavior. How about it Markie, where you a drug abuser when you were younger.

That would be fine, as a matter of fact why don't you send me an email so you can watch it bounce because I don't post though AOL and the account does not exist, such a foolish man you are. I only want you and others to think I do...just shows how stupid you and others are.
I give you a small sense of accomplishment when you look at the headers and you think you have discovers something by seeing AOL, when in fact, instead of just posting all of that fictious lines like the other anons do when they alter their headers, I insert copied headeres from others posts. You are so gulible and have much to learn. Good luck with that approach. Very tired now. Chat with you later

You still haven't answered about the lesbo books??

Would those books be the ones with the hirsute female weight lifters?
There aren't too many of "those" in Chassell these days. Most of the man-haters in that area are sixties clones, Hippy wannabees, who think they are performing artists of one sort or another. Of course none of them make it past the local theater and most subsist by trying to pander homemade wind chimes, love beads, paisely headbands, and other "artsy-crafty" stuff while living on the cusp of poverty. Most, like Mark, are societal misfits.

Peace, Love, Dove. If it feels good, do it. Jimi Hendrix lives!
And keep that picture of Janis Joplin on your incense stand.

There's a retarded line of reasoning. Usenet's serious business, I suppose. All of his usenet posting warranted some kind of drastic response, I take it? Was he pissing in your playpen? Ruining "your" group? Speaking as an official Usenet Ruiner, bully for him.

Indeed. Fuck of a lot more serious than some newsgroup.

Is Dave Heil being "brave" by posting his name and callsign? Considering what some deeply retarded and obsessed people will do about usenet posts
-- words on a fucking screen -- it seems to me that it could very well be quite brave of him.

>> Mark is utterly incapable of recognizing how the blog appears to others.
>> No one would deliberately make himself look that foolish.

Um, I think you're being a tad extreme. It's only a blog, after all. I think everyone has one, by now. I have two...Gotta be more than one dyslexic with a blog on this planet. But I guess some people think appearances mean an awful lot.

The gay lames from Wabbit could also do with being cut back. He's raising his BI quite a lot...Then again, that helps with his long-term campaign for a Busted Urinal.

>> They might and they might not. Mark hasn't just presented himself as a

However, he brought Wabbit to the attention of alt.usenet.kooks, once and for all. With any luck, the screams about criminal charges, harassment, lawsuits for defamation and libel, and so on will begin within a year or two (from Wabbit's direction), as soon as he becomes sufficiently interesting to the bulk of my colleagues. Then the real fun can begin...Mind you, RRAP will likely become a smoking crater, once and for all, after that, if it isn't one already, but that's your business.
Making smoking craters is mine.

>> > But that is too much to ask, and certainly well beyond your ability

The flooding and the inanity are what earned him a Golden Killfile.
OTOH, the whining from the rest of you nearly earned RRAP as a whole a GK. That could still be arranged.

>> The last clause in your statement sums it up. Mark cannot understand

I dunno, he appears to me as a bunch of usenet posts with variable spelling. Do usenet posts make you see things that you shouldn't really be able to see?

>> > Your case is further weakened when one looks at your ongoing >> > exchanges with Woger athttp://nimbusters.com/forum/forum.php?board=1

Isn't that a public service? You know, keeping the Wabbit occupied with a webforum instead of bothering anyone who might know how to post.

>> > You, Mark, are merely reaping that which you have sown. You have

Ah, yes, arson, aggravated assault, and the slaughter of pets are all reasonable in the face of obnoxious posting. I must remember that. There is nothing graver than enduring posters who make you scream and rant and rave. Come, tell Snarky all about your trauma from having to read Mark's posts. I promise I won't laugh...hard.

"Marriage lies"? Do you have any particular reason for believing he has true about radio hams being k00ky stalkers?

I'm not willing to go to the trouble of trying to kf Wabbit, and Mark's no more prolific than him, taking all of the scared little coward's posts as coming from one person.

L. Mencken

"Consider that language a moment. 'Purposefully and materially supported hostilities against the United States' is in the eye of the beholder, and this administration has proven itself to be astonishingly impatient with criticism of any kind. The broad powers given to Bush by this legislation allow him to capture, indefinitely detain, and refuse a hearing to any American citizen who speaks out against Iraq or any other part of the so-called 'War on Terror.'

"If you write a letter to the editor attacking Bush, you could be deemed as purposefully and materially supporting hostilities against the United States. If you organize or join a public demonstration against Iraq, or against the administration, the same designation could befall you. One dark-comedy aspect of the legislation is that senators or House members who publicly disagree with Bush, criticize him, or organize investigations into his dealings could be placed under the same designation. In effect, Congress just gave Bush the power to lock them up." -- William Rivers Pitt

"It has become clear in recent months that a critical mass of the American people have seen through the lies of the Bush administration; with the president's polls at an historic low, growing resistance to the war Iraq, and the Democrats likely to take back the Congress in mid-term elections, the Bush administration is on the ropes. And so it is particularly worrying that President Bush has seen fit, at this juncture to, in effect, declare himself dictator." -- Frank Morales

Poor Mark. Nobody is arguing with him at the moment, so he dredges up old posts to respond to.
Something is direly wrong with you, Mark. When you fail to attain the attention you seek, you stoop to new lows to garner attention.

I pity your poor, tortured soul. I'll say a prayer for you.

Because I don't know too many woman who like violent movies, and besides Gav seems to be one of the artsy fartsy searching my soul/religion types. She apparently likes the renaissance period, cooking, arts/crafts ect. Seems like a fairly well adjusted individual. I don't know how she ended up with someone as skewed as Mark. Go figure.

How many times have I said that you suffer from faulty thinking?

Poor Robesin, you crap on this newsgroup and the people in it for the better part of a decade, and think that they must stop when you do.

Perhaps Mark was the one who wanted the cookbooks? Given his proclivities previously posted in various newsgroups, it wouldn't at all be an improbable conclusion that he is, in fact, the one who wears the panties in the family.

I'm trying to get these various "facts" as presented clarified. The assumption was the Steven Segal movies were for Mark, and the cookbook for his wife.

In absence of supporting evidence, I feel it is erroneous to draw these conclusions, as there is ample prior evidence to suggest Mark would be equally interested in assuming the "feminine" role in his relationship as he would the "masculine" role.

Steve's let himself go these past few years though. You might want to stay with movies up-to and including "Under Siege". After that, his movies have declined (Exit Wounds wasn't particularly bad however).

2828. Mark jumps to 60 posts/day for March

I have now eliminated the counting of posts which originate at AOL, due to the forgeries which have come from there. Several additional tests are made on a post before it is counted in an attempt to avoid obvious forgeries (for example, Google posts must contain a posting IP address which belongs to direcpc). As of this date, the following totals were obtained

rec.radio.amateur.misc - 571
rec.radio.amateur.policy - 827
alt.radio.scanner.flame_fest - 65

Total: 1463 unique posts during March.

Crossposts have only been counted once and assigned to the first newsgroup listed in the Newsgroups line. For example, a post crossposted to both rram and rrap is counted only once and assigned to rram. That is also the way in which the files are saved internally by the news server, and that is the reason flame_fest is included (all posts counted there were also crossposted to rrap or rram but were not counted in those groups).

Mark's March posting frequency is approximately 60 posts per day.

Better get to stepping, Mark, if you're going to make 2000 posts this month.

They call it "serving in other ways..." :-(

Let them go up to Newington's Barracks and stand guard around the Diamond Terrace and protect it with their LIVES
if they want to "serve."

They only thing they "serve" is their own imaginations.

Amateur radio is supposed to be about enjoying an interesting, technical avocation. In here it is mostly

a group of middle-school mentality male misfits carping at all the others who won't agree with them.

The "Diamond Terrace" project is something the ARRL thought up...apparently to enshrine its own home grounds. I have nothing against such a project but I object to what I think is a mis-use of "my club" funds in order to boost their home grounds appearance and "memory." [I am a member of the ARRL]

Making up some nebulous "reason" for enshrining some names, possibly callsigns, in a "memory walk" area is a rather transparent effort to bring in more funds for the home ground's budget. It only reinforces a false delusion of "greatness" of past amateur radio hobbyists which will lead other, newer amateurs into a false idea of their hobby.

The "Diamond Terrance" project isn't even close to the Vietnam War Memorial. Those whose names are on that memorial gave their LIVES in the service of their country. Amateur radio is a hobby pursuit, NOT a "service to the country" nor even close to it.

Those of us who HAVE served our country in the military know the true feeling of such service. Those who have not so served will never know it nor understand it. They cannot ever understand it.

When I was last in DC it was decades ago. "The Wall"

Asia. There WAS a real, shooting war in northeast Asia then. Were YOU there? In Korea?

I have recieved the info on Michigans cyber creepline they are alas closed on the weekend I had this info before and will be contacting them on Monday

I expect little from them but we shall see as to someone hacking into Amazon that road look more promising, although my wifes report of a possible secutiry breach has only receveied a automated reply it is something. If amazon takes an interest something may result from it after Amazon has clout and thus would find it easier to gain the assistance of LE should the need

I didn't steal or "hack" into anything. You have got to be one of the stupidist people I have ever had contact with on the internet. You act as if I stole your credit card information. If you don't want your personal business known, then don't make profiles about yourself in the public domain. None of the information I revealed was under any protection whatsoever and is not protected by any law in the U.S.A., no passwords were violated or user accounts breached to obtain the information. All you have to do is go to a search engine that is worth a hoot, and the information can be found quite easily.

The bottom line Markie, if you didn't screw with people on RRAM and RRAP all the time no one would bother you. Do you think were all going to just sit here and take your crap day in and day out without saying a word. Seems as though you got a little bit of your own medicine and you don't like the taste. Well cry me a river, Boo F'ing Hoo.

in point of fact it doesn't although that is theory, Dloyd all that has to ocour is for it to apear that a crime may have been comited and that be interested enough to investagte

wher both circumstances exist esp the later is something we will have to wait and see as it still not monday and thus the office is not open to make a non emergency report, and clearly while a crime HAS been commited reposne to it is not that time critcial I have thanks you your posting about the incendent on YOUR blog your confession to obtaining the Data, your USENET posts make it clear since then you have been wroking toward the gaol of harrassing us and by giving at least the appearence of having stolen from us you have crossed the threshold of theantening behavoir taking matter, as to wther they will be interested enough to follow through well we shall see

I promise to do what I can, as I have said I am pessimistic as to the results but a stalkng victum such as myself only has to get lucky with your posible slopiness once to suceed, it is just another from of asymetric warfare. to succeed you must never make a a mistake. I think this time you may have made that error, maybe I am wrong in which when I sure you have gotten away with this I will offer you my cograts, till then. I do the same with Woger I can be as gracious with you

No pass unless a physical disability was involved. If they had better things to do or just didn't want to, then too bad.

I'm with the ARRL Vice Director that said we shouldn't believe own own

It can be about emergency communications.

For example, I have a fire extinguisher in my kitchen but that doesn't mean that I'm the fire department.

Perhaps actual ARRL members should have a complimentary brick, and not

The only "memorial" I need are the QSL cards that are in the shacks of all the hams I've sent my card to.

You can't completely ignore the emergency communications aspect of the hobby.

How can it be a misuse in the first paragraph when in the second you see it as a means of fundraising?

It obviously is a means of fundraising. Lots of organizations will put up a plaque or name a building after you if you donate enough money. Other organizations will let you "buy" a chair or something, and put a plaque on it.

Any organization generally has a fixed income, and a fixed budget. If they want to do something extraordinary, they need to do this sort of fundraising campaign, so they can raise money without raising fees or whatever their usual source of income.

What people are forgetting is that this isn't even new for the ARRL.
IN the early sixties, when they wanted a new HQ building, they had a long fundraising campaign. There was a regular "thermometer" type display in many or all issues, showing how close to the goal the fundraising was going.
I thought they might have sold "bricks" but the first issue I find that has a report says nothing about that, though a certificate was issued to each donor. It got the HQ building built, but didn't take away from existing work, or raise membership fees. The people who paid for the new building were happy to do so, because they were doing it on a voluntary basis.

This is basically an extension of that fundraiser. The idea being taht if there is something permanent, people are more likely to donate money. If they get something tangible, they don't even have to be concerned with what the money is used for, which means "outsiders" can even be tempted to donate. (Maybe not in this case, but when that theatre group here has their annual raffle, the lure of the prizes

should mean a broadened base of ticket buyers.)

The ARRL is using its PRESENT facilities to publicize this "Diamond Terrace." I would personally prefer they do something else with "donations" rather than beautify their grounds with memorials that are 3K miles from me.

I'm well aware of those things.

Let's cut to the chase here. The ARRL is also a publishing business. That is the major non-secret to their coming to the top of the membership organizations of amateur radio before WW2...and staying there well after WW2 ended.

> What people are forgetting is that this isn't even new for the ARRL.

Well, that's very nice. Yes, they need facilities to keep their publishing business going so that it can be the major source of income that pays the staff (who work in the buildings), pays the utilities, pays the billing of the DC legal staff, pays the lobbying organization in DC. Etc. I've also seen their federal income tax returns which report a taxable multi-million dollar annual profit.

I am more than familiar with theater groups, even if they spell it "theatre." :-) Lots of them in the Los Angeles area. This is the entertainment center of the world (and big business, regardless of what NYC thinks).

I'm not going to wage war over this Diamond Terrace project.
I just object to it in its present form, okay?

I say again, I don't care for THIS particular "memorial" thing and it means nothing to me for spiffying-up some building entrance that is 3K miles from me in cold New England territory. What would Hawaiian or Alaskan amateurs think of such "memorials" considering they are even further away?

Bottom line: The ARRL is not some local club that depends near-total on member contributions. But, the way I see it, the League sometimes tries sales pitches to make distant members THINK they "need to contribute."

it leaves a poor odor in my nose
that is the best way to describe it

the ARRL has over the year made a dreadfull first impression, poor second impresion allowed to to spend several years and some of my money holding my nose then a realy bad impression (an incident never mentioned in RRAP) of being very unhelpfull in my effort to implement a change of address when I move stating at point I should "spend a couople of hours learning Code and then upgrade my license and then the VE would take care of it for me" my hearing went out of focus and within either minute or what seemed like years myas that sucnk I then hung up and decided to let my membership expire

I have tried to find reason to hold my nose again and rejion but I just can't I was prepared to when Carl ran for director, and then.. and this does this and that this project again makes me clamp down on my nose to avoid actively attacking the ARRL. I must conclude that at best CT is badly out of touch with the rest of the nation of hams

True. But, I think there is TOO MUCH EMPHASIS on this "emergency communications," so much so that it has become a trite cliche' of rationalization by some. [I think we all know who those are...]

If we look at the REAL reason behind amateur radio, we will find out it is NOT "because" of the emergency communications POSSIBILITY, but just for the ability to communicate and tinker with radios.

Neither, I think. :-)

I have nothing against donations made to membership organizations.
What I am against is the idea of a quasi-shrine sort of memorial to what is basically a hobby activity...and over-much emphasis on all the "excellence" of those who are memorialized...and at the same time trumpeting the idea that the League is THE judgemental organization that determines such "excellence." History determines that, not some organization trying to brainwash its membership into believing ONLY the League.

Sounds good to me.

Recently the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce had to move some of the embedded brass-and-terrazo "stars" on its "Hollywood Walk of Fame." Digging under them was needed for deeper street-sidewalk repair. No big hu-hu on that and all here know full well the whole "Walk of Fame" thing is one huge publicity thing. The entertainment biz is very much INTO publicity of any kind, indeed one of the life-blood factors of the business. Nobody rationalizes that those stars mean "greatness" or "excellence." Except some tourists from way out of town...who really like celebrites. Billions have seen the work of actors and entertainers; they are "larger than life" on the big screen and leave indelible impressions in the minds (and imaginations) of the audiences. Big impact and BIG Business. This area is the acknowledged center of world motion picture and television production.

I see this "Diamond Terrace" little more than a transitory trip to some kind of publicity for the League, a publicity designed to generate income for the League and make the League grounds a prettier place to WORK in...locally. I'm not about to become a Believer tourist who makes a trip to Newington to "pay respects to olde-tymers immortalized" in bricks to be walked upon. I doubt you would be one of those.

I do know some who ARE Believers in the ARRL, to the point of making outright gifts to them. Gifts for what? Services rendered? Such service is implicit in the membership contract all members sign (in the equivalent of actual signature via e-mail/Internet application). Unfortunately, the League goes overboard on its own publicity for the VALUE of such services...and at the same time, doing its PR thing for publications from the League...publications that increase the monetary profits TO the League.

We are engaged in a HOBBY activity for the purposes of communicating with others. If a very few of us managed to come up with something that really advances the state of the art of radio and communications, that is a good thing. However, MOST radio amateurs just USE their radios in the hobby. The stage is set for imagination trips in such use. Some align themselves WITH the movers and shakers of technology AS IF they, too, were innovators/pioneers in something. They aren't. They are mainly hobbyists having fun in a technological endeavor. There should be nothing wrong with that, but some individual egos just won't let go and join reality.

>> The "Diamond Terrance" project isn't even close to the >> Vietnam War Memorial. Those whose names are on that >> Amateur radio is a hobby pursuit, NOT a "service to the >> country" nor even close to it.

>You can't completely ignore the emergency communications aspect of the >hobby.

I'm not. I've been trying to point out that MOST radio amateurs are just into radio for communicating or tinkering with radios for their own enjoyment. Thoughts of 'heroism' or 'serving the community' by means of their radios is largely imaginary or exaggerated...or just a rationalization (usually invalid) as an excuse for playing with radios, sometimes rather expensive toys. The vast majority of radio amateurs have NO experience with real emergencies and few have training in such things beyond lecturing in a classroom.

The "Diamond Terrace" project doesn't have a thing to do with emergency communications, does it?

THAT is the wrongness...on their part.

You have the abilty to effectively stop me from taking anyaction aganist as in effective as any such action are presently, you operate from behind you wall of proxy and falsenames etc. I do not I live in open and I stand therfore behind my words and actions.

It is not a crime to want to kill you and your cadre of stalkers, this a fortunenate for the liberals that so desperately seem to want the president dead. One can even express such desires openly.

If one asumes you are truely just a fool that has blunged into the 10 years effort of Robeson, Wismen et all to stalk and harrass then prehaps you should take a lession that you need to know you enemy before you enage him this advice "know your eneimy know yourself and Victory shal be thine" is from SinTzu the art of war (don't have date this was written handy)

Under the Recently enacted "Castle Doctrine Laws of the state of Michigan I or anyone may use deadly force in defense of oneself in excerising one right to be where one lawfully has right to be. As I understand the matter that would certainly include the USENET. I further opine that I may most any method short of deadly force to defend that right. This I have done. this I will continue I am prepared to submit to due process of law.

I further opine that under the legal theory I must retreat where possible to avoid a confrontation poir to using deadly that prevailed in Mich till the new laws were enacted, well given that I can't move out of his way even by retreating completely off line, this does not stop his contiued ferreting out of info about me anf my wife and myfamily and spreading his effort to alrger and larger realms, thus I conclude if it were found that I was subject to some other juristction where retreat if possible was the rule since I can not reat or avoid Dloyd Effort against my wifes account my phone number and internet access that retreat is not an issue and if threatened I may peotencaily use deadly force against "dloyd"

"dloyd" OTOH can reatreat and avoid me entirely since he has sheileded his existance to point I can't find who he is, he can simply shut down and leave and thus he can disengag e where the Honest man can't

No I make no such admission nor do I demned you disapear I point out it is one way you could choose to deal with the results of YOUR you don't have the right however to demand I limit my rights to post or suffer further cyber attack on my wife or myself

I have to right to reply to any post I choose the problem s you refuse to accept that right and seem to suffer from the delsuion you have the

I have never demanded that Dloyd cease posting although I have sugested that deep sixing the dloyd moniker would be an option

I have never dispurted the right of the person behind the dloyd nick to post. I never will what I dispute and what he threatens further action based on is his demand I stop comenting on his posts or else.

that is the problem dloyd demands I submit to blackmail. he insists my right to post is lessoer in some fashion to his own and he threatens further criminal action against me and my wife if I don't submit to such

I have not boasted anything, I have only commented about your

No, your the blackmailer, who has said that you will kill me if I don't remove my blog and stop posting, that is blackmail by threats.

Post the data, prove me wrong. You are chomping at the bit to get me, if you had any factual data you would of posted it by now to have something to crow about.

When I took down my blog for some maintenance for 8 minutes a short time back, by the time I had it back up, you had already been over here crowing about it must of been removed by blogger. If you had something to squak about, you would of done so by now.

Because you have not one iota of proof that I did anything wrong, they may investigate but will rightfully find that I have broken no laws, because I did not hack into anything, I only found information that was posted to a public accessable web page without any protection whatsoever.

I am not the sorehead, you are the one who went on a tirade Saturday, attacking each and every thread that I had posted in, legitimate or not. I haven't abused anyone, I have commented on your posts, and refuted your outlandish claims with facts, which you don't like.

Don't be a dreamer and so archaic, if you want to settle this like man, act like a man and not a little kid, terrorizing the news groups and using profanity like some elementary school kid trying to look cool. I tried several times to post on topic, but you had to post right behind me, not commenting on topic, but with some harrassing comment. And then when I lash out, you go berserk and start attacking everythread that I ever posted in, you need to grow up.

Intentional or not, facts are facts.
Unintentionally running a stop sign doesn't mean you're innocent.
Unintentionally disrupting the newsgroups likewise doesn't mean you are not doing so.
1500 posts in a month say otherwise.

I hide so a manic like you won't try to kill me for posting my true thoughts on the internet, you have already admitted your intent to harm me, so my nym is justified.

All that I have asked is to post in peace, but you have admitted above that you can't let me because it is your right to harrass me as long as it is kept on the news groups, I believe otherwise and will not succumb to your threats of death and terms of blackmail to remove my

I don't stalk anyone. I've tried to engage you in constructive dialog on several occasions, but eventially you go on the attack and stalk me, I tried to ignore you, but then you go on the attack and stalk me further. I haven't stolen anything. You put a list on a public accessable web site without protection, Google's cache picked it up, and I posted it here, it was not protected, what is the issue. Would you be as upset if I posted you eham profile, I think not?.

The easiest path is to leave me alone and stop posting my name all over the place, but no you are unable to stop you reign of terror, threats, and harrassment against me.

You need to prove your unsubstantiated claims before publishing accusations. If true, I hope they catch the person or persons responsible. Then I can laugh at your misdirected buffoonery. However, you are very similar to Lloyd, in that he also always jumped to conclusions without a shred of evidence, but usually all of his tales of personal misdeads conducted againist his person were always false, as I am sure your's are just as made up trying to imply that some great misfortune happened to you because a wedding registry from a public web page was posted. Next thing you will post in a few days is the fem to fem book did not belong to you or your wife, and it was that book which was frauded on your credit card, thus removing the inuendo you were using as the basis of your death threats to me. I see where this is going.....OH MY its another GREAT CONSPIRACY......stay tuned.....

THE END

what propose? why my own of course.

when I have such data I will then decide how to use it, untill I know what the answer to that question is I can not rule out anything of course. If you happened to a certain person of my aquaintance living a certain state that being Texas why I might well show and inflict bodily harm upon you, it would be quite legal if I can show to a jury
"it needed to be done" Texas law still a bit ofthe wild west in, otherwise who and where you lived would determine my legal and practical options

itsn't that obvious

"I decided to rename the blog. I read some posts concerning the past actions of some in regard to Mark Morgan. Personally, my opinion is to keep it on the net, period. Unless someone is breaking the law, there really is no need to interfere with anyone beyond the net. Once you cross that line and start interferring with people's personal lives, it just takes the fun out of the whole thing. Furthermore, that type of behavior is probably illegal, uncalled for, and IMO malicious. I believe some have crossed the line. So I decided to refrain from directly commenting about Mark Morgan, he gets enough grief already.
However, I will still monitor everybody's favorite wacky racist and religious host, Lloyd Davies."

Alun, for an obvious Anglophile Miccolis doesn't know much. Tsk, you had best "Elmer" him in such things. Or perhaps have him watch PBS-TV on a 48-hour marathon of BBS telly shows from the 1970s.

One of the problems that created the total spam in this newsgroup is the "newsgroup bloggers" such as Miccolis, vainly trying to find an outlet for his unrepentant evangelism for morse code mode...and trying to pretend he is one of the olde-tymers in hamme raddio.

I don't pretend to be one of those "auld hammes" but I've been IN and ON radio since early 1953...in many radio services, including being a third-party guest of several licensed amateurs during live contacts. Miccolis' spite is so long-lasting and ever-present that he feels compelled to continue his denigrations. No matter.
After the first weeks of that years ago, he is no more than the usual computer-modem communicator whose ego has been deflated and thus tries to "get back" at his imaginary "enemies."

On February 23rd of 2007 there was a sedate "revolution" in U.S.
amateur radio and the elimination of the code test from all license class examinations. That obviously HURT many of the egos of the olde-tymers who now prided themselves (inordinately) on their mastership of morse and, more importantly, being "better than average amateurs" for having gained the amateur extra class license. They loved the status, the rank, the privileges, the prestige and were not above shoving it on all "lesser" beings in the hobby. That was morally wrong but one cannot say that to these mighty macho morsemen without repercussions for at least a decade's worth of spite on their part.

The "revolution" happened but few took part. At most the changes taking place were a lot of class upgrades in the USA. There was NO ground-swell of "no-coders" and "CB-types" suddenly filling the HF bands with "bad behavior." [the bad behavior was already there and alive from the already-tested-in-morse-code licensees]

The "revolution" had already begun in 1991 with the creation of the no-code-test Technician Class. That single category is the ONLY class responsible for keeping the total number of USA amateur licensees from falling drastically in numbers. Let's face it, the "actuarial tables" WILL have their way with ALL human endeavors, no exceptions. USA amateur radio was growing in age all along but its greying members were busy, busy denying it while trying to forget about their own mortality, hearkening
to a time when they were young and the world (to them) was new.
Those olde-tymers were too busy making themselves feel "important" to notice that CHANGES were happening in the hobby. Such denial is one of the first signs of decay in any human endeavor...but they denied that, mightily.

I didn't really consider getting an amateur radio license until February 17th of this year. I'd had (and still do) a commercial license since March 1956. But, it would be, I thought, a FUN hobby in my retirement years. I don't need the experience to "further my career" (I've had one, reasonably successfully) or "give back" anything to anybody. I was not interested in "emergency work" or volunteerism in radio...I am a volunteer in other things. Neither am I interested in advancing the state of the radio art just for the sake of saying I am advancing the state of the radio art. Theory and construction are simply part of the fun, of being able to legally try out some experiments which are fun to do in themselves. Hobbies are about personal enjoyment for its own sake...although many pervert their own desires to "be someone" by taking up certain hobbies in order to brag about it.

Was the license exam "hard?" No. On the most objective comparison, it would be on the order of college-level quarter tests in first or second year of formal study...some memorization of regulations and new terms and procedures specifically about amateur radio practice. To anyone who has been IN radio (of almost any kind) for a decade, it was not difficult. Test element 4 question pool contains about 16 times the minimum specified number of 10 (as regulated by the FCC) questions and the "hard" part could be said to be in trying to spot the distractors in phrasing/syntax obviously put there by the VEC QPC. The "hard" part might be the waiting between elements while a group of 20 goes through its required tests and grading, most of whom were applicants for Technician and General class licenses in my exam group. By observation I was the only one going "extra out of the box"...and apparently the only one in the experience of that ARRL VEC test team to have done so...at least recently.

Did that test experience and license grant "make me better?" Not really. What I knew I already knew about radio in general, from theoretical to original design to operating. The only thing unique in USA amateur radio is the regulations and the on-air procedure. Otherwise it is no "better" than any other radio service...who all have their own specific regulations and procedure and jargon.

I enjoy some minor prestige in the sequential call assignment for "newbies" who have achieved amateur extra. It yields a lot of freedom in operating the bands below 23 cm..no real restrictions based on Class of license. It gains some attention from dealers of amateur radio equipment, some good and some bad considering I ask pointed questions about certain products and have always been a "hard sell" for salesmen. :-)

It should be a lot of FUN. Except in this (and similar) newsgroups where the emphasis seems to be on general in-fighting of the "establishment" versus (or is that 'verses' waxing poetic?) those seeking change. I have the advantage of knowing other amateurs from past acquaintenceship and work experience and already have made "contacts" with some of those. No "elmering" needed among friends. Real friends, not the false labels of those pretending to be "friends."

In this first month of the "revolution," it is like "they gave a war but nobody showed up." :-) Wouldn't it be nice if all wars were like that?

There is no such word as "legaly". Given your tendency to consistantly mangle the English language, I feel safe in saying the reader could construe that they word you meant was "illegally", and thus, feel appropriately threatened.
